Police Launch All-Out Search

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Police of 50 departments launched an all-out search Wednesday for the killer who smothered an abducted boy only a few hours before his body was found in a roadside ditch.

Discovery of the body of 11-year-old Timothy King of Birmingham resulted in intensified police efforts to catch the killer or killers, who apparently abducted the boy from a neighborhood drugstore March 16.

Medical Examiner Dr. Werner Spitz of Wayne County fixed the time of death at between 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. Tuesday. The body apparently was placed carefully, not thrown, by a Livonia roadside, and was discovered at 10:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Spitz said marks on the youth's body indicated his hands and feet had been bound at times during his apparent captivity. He said the boy had been sexually molested.

Spitz said the autopsy showed the boy was fed a fried chicken dinner shortly before his death and added that the boy's body was clean and may have been bathed recently.

Police attached some significance to the chicken dinner, for the boy's mother, Mrs. Marian King, wrote a letter to a newspaper Sunday in which she begged the killer to free her son so he could come home to a chicken meal.

Investigators probing the deaths of seven youngsters in 14 months in southeastern Michigan told a news conference earlier Wednesday that the killer could be a doctor, clergyman or even a police officer.

"It can be anyone," said Birmingham Police Chief Jerry Tobin. "He does not fit the prototype of some dirty old man handing candy to children."

"That's not the case in this instance," he told reporters, hours after the body of the seventh victim was discovered.

"This person is a trusted individual. It could be a public official, it could be a doctor, it could even be a police officer."

Tobin explained the children are going along with the killer and for some reason, not resisting.

When the children are abducted, he said, "it's not causing such a commotion that the

The man who police say has murdered four Oakland County youngsters in the last 13 months is attracted to children aged 10 to 12, sexually assaults the boys but not the girls and leaves his victims clean and in funeral positions on quiet roads.

He may be triggered to abduct by a snowfall, and has the ability to keep the victims hidden for as long as 19 days before murdering them.

Police said the abductor prefers to kill the children by suffocating them, as he apparently did with the latest victim, Timothy King, 11, of Birmingham. The boy's body was found late Tuesday along a road just across the Oakland-Wayne County line. He had been abducted March 16.

Timothy was the seventh child to be abducted and murdered in crimes that began or ended in Oakland County since January 1976. Police said they believe four of the children were victims of the same person or persons.

Those children were: —Timothy King. He was last seen in a drugstore parking lot three blocks from his home. His body was found in a ditch in Livonia.

—Kristine Mihelich, 10, of Berkley. She was last seen Jan.

2 at a party store near her home. Her body was found in the snow in Franklin on Jan. 21.

—Jill Robinson, 12, who ran away from her home after an argument with her mother on Dec. 22, 1976. She was last seen that night near her home in Royal Oak. She was found in the snow along a highway in Troy on Dec. 26.

—Mark Stebbins, 12, of Ferndale. He disappeared Feb. 2, 1976, after leaving an American Legion Hall. His body was found 17 days later in a parking lot in Southfield.

Police said they believe the other three children were the victims of other killers.

The four children whose disappearances officials believe are linked were found dead on days that it snowed.

Going To Plains? Heed This Advice

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — One million tourists are expected to swarm over the home town of President Carter this summer. Here are a few observations to ease the visit:

Do expect to wait in line at Billy Carter's service station. Don't expect to pull up a milk crate and sip a beer with the President's brother while you're waiting. Besides, police frown on public beer-guzzling.

Don't plan to blend in with the local citizens. There are 683 residents, so you'll be spotted right off as a tourist, who sometimes outnumber townspeople two-to-one.

Do notice the many parcels of land and picturesque houses for sale.

Don't ask how much they cost unless you're ready for a jolt.

Do plan to pay tourists' prices. That's what you are. Do relax as you walk around town. A couple of years ago, life in this small southwest Georgia hamlet moved a bit slower than other parts of the state and nation. When you take a break, some of the town's Southern charm manages to seep through souvenir stands with their smiling peanut replicas.

And, of course, don't make jokes about peanuts.

Fear Stalking Detroit's Suburbs

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

At a Farmington Hills library Wednesday, all the youngsters were called to the main desk 30 minutes before closing time.

They were instructed to call their parents. Library officials told the children they would not be released from the library unless they had a ride home.

Earlier in the day at schools throughout the affluent northern Detroit suburb, children from kindergarten to high school levels were ordered by officials to walk to and from school in pairs.

Parents in other nearby suburbs, where many of them moved to escape the "dangers" of Detroit, were lecturing their children about not talking to strangers and not taking rides in cars.

All over the area, children, parents and police officials alike are afraid. Late Tuesday, the body of an 11-year-old Birmingham boy was found, ending a search for him that began six days earlier when Timothy King vanished near his home in Birmingham. An autopsy showed the boy had been suffocated and sexually assaulted.

Timothy was the seventh child to vanish and later be found dead in crimes that began or ended in Oakland County in the last 14 months. Police say they believe four of those crimes, including Timothy's death, were the work of the same person or persons.

The only visible signs of concern Wednesday were long lines of cars parked outside schools, where parents waited to pick up their youngsters.

But inside homes, safety was the main topic.

"Everytime my 11-year-old boy walks out the door, I'm afraid," said Lana Hall of Royal

Oak. "I wonder if I'm going to see him again."

"I go to the corner every day and watch for him to come home from school," she added. "If he's two minutes late, I panic."

Mrs. Hall has organized a band of about 50 parents to stand on street corners every morning and afternoon to watch the children as they walk to school.

"I thought we might see something," Mrs. Hall said. "Maybe a man has spoken to some children. Maybe a car has been circling the block."

Something just has to be done," Jill Robinson, the fifth victim of the seven, lived nearby and Mrs. Hall's oldest son went to school with her.

Another parent reports her young daughter too afraid to go out and play alone. Another says her son gets sick to his stomach when he read and hears about the murders. Several parents report their children are having vivid nightmares.

"How do you combat these fears?" asked one Royal Oak mother. "You can't really tell them it's all right, because it might not be."

In Birmingham, also the home of victim Sheila Brock, many schools called parents whose children were absent to make sure the children were really at home.

"The thing that's scary is that we live in the middle of the area where all this is happening," said Katherine Burns, whose two sons attend school in the suburb. "It's all around us. It's a terrible thing to have to live under."

years.
On March 28, the price for

On April 1, the rate for motor

Banyon said continually rising raise that was in effect last year for 23 other Michigan daily newspapers with a single copy price of 20 cents.

Banyon said when The Herald-Palladium last raised its price in 1971 it was buying

Newsprint today is $305. The price of ink has doubled and labor costs have risen more than 50 per cent.

"Faced with this inflationary

He added that a share of the dealers who get the paper to the public.

Among papers with a 20-cent single copy price are Ann Arbor

Police Launch All-Out Search

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) —
Police of 50 departments launched an all-out search Wednesday for the killer who smothered an abducted boy only a few hours before his body was found in a roadside ditch.

Discovery of the body of 11-

The only visible signs of concern Wednesday were long lines

see him again.

"I go to the corner every day and watch for him to come home from school," she added.
"If he's two minutes late, I panic."

Mrs. Hall has organized a band of about 50 parents to stand on street corners every morning and afternoon to watch the children as they walk to

"I thought we might see

"Maybe a man has spoken to

Mrs. Hall's oldest son went to school with her.

Another parent reports her young daughter too afraid to go out and play alone. Another says her son gets sick to his stomach when he read and hears about the murders. Several parents report their children are having vivid nightmares.

"How do you combat these fears?" asked one Royal Oak mother. "You can't really tell make sure the children were

"The thing that's scary is that

Were it left to me to decide whether we should have government without newspapers or newspapers without government, I should not hesitate to prefer the latter. — Thomas Jefferson.

Unemployment Benefits System Needs Overhaul

The federal government generally deals with unemployment in two ways: by stimulating the economy in an attempt to create jobs, and by providing financial assistance to those who are unable to find work. The additional $4-billion for emergency public works projects recently approved by the House was basically a job-creation measure. And now the House soon will vote on a bill to extend for one year the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act of 1974, which is scheduled to expire on March 31.

Under the 1974 act, as amended, jobless workers may receive unemployment benefits for a maximum period of 65 weeks. The extension bill would reduce the maximum period of eligibility to 52 weeks. The benefits, which are not taxable, typically replace between 50 and 60 per cent of a worker's after-tax income. This does not include other income-assistance benefits, such as food stamps, that the jobless worker may receive.

The principle of unemployment compensation enjoys broad support, but the program's cost to state and federal governments is caused for concern. Total benefits payments increased from $7-billion in calendar year 1974 to an estimated $19-billion in fiscal year 1976. At the same time, unemployment compensation system revenues have increased by only about $1-billion.

As a result, 16 states plus Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia have borrowed $2-billion from the federal government to keep this unemployment benefit programs going. More than half of the money was borrowed by just three states — Connecticut, New Jersey and our own Michigan. If the debtor jurisdictions do not start repaying the loans after two years, federal law requires that they impose a penalty tax on employers to meet the deferral payments.

The patchwork nature of the unemployment compensation system, in which responsibility is diffused among the federal and state capitals, has led to demands for reform. Rep. Charles A. Vanik (D-Ohio), a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, said shortly after the 1974 emergency act was passed: "It is past time that the entire unemployment compensation system was thoroughly reviewed and overhauled." And yet nothing of the kind has been done so far.

The current system has been criticized also on the ground that it tends to prolong unemployment. With benefits often available for a year or more, the argument goes, the jobless worker's incentive to find new employment as soon as possible is reduced. He may even turn down low-paying jobs that are available to him.

And it is well that he does, the system's supporters contend. "... Income maintenance afforded by unemployment insurance benefits encourages the unemployed to engage in productive job search," economists Ronald G. Ehrenberg and Ronald L. Oaxaca wrote in the Department of Labor's Monthly Labor Review. "In short, unemployment insurance benefits enable unemployed workers to hold out for jobs that are more commensurate with their skills."

As is the case with the welfare controversy, the debate over unemployment benefits probably will never be settled to the satisfaction of everyone. The aim in both cases is to help the needy, but not so much or for so long as to foster permanent dependency.

Unfortunately, the latter is too frequently the reality.

Overpriced Highways Falling Way Behind

An example of how easily even a worthwhile project with demonstrable benefits can mushroom into a financial nightmare is the interstate highway system. When originally begun in 1957, the 42,500-mile system was tagged with an expected cost of $37.5 billion.

High though that seemed at the time, the highway network today is five years past the schedule completion date and already has cost $100 billion. Worse, the end is not in sight.

With remaining links still to be completed, a survey of the existing system in February concluded that the highways then in use were deteriorating 50 per cent faster than replacements were coming into use.

With perpetual maintenance costs now adding heavily to total interstate funding, the pressure is on to boost federal gasoline taxes substantially in the near future.

They Rejected Indira To Keep Democracy

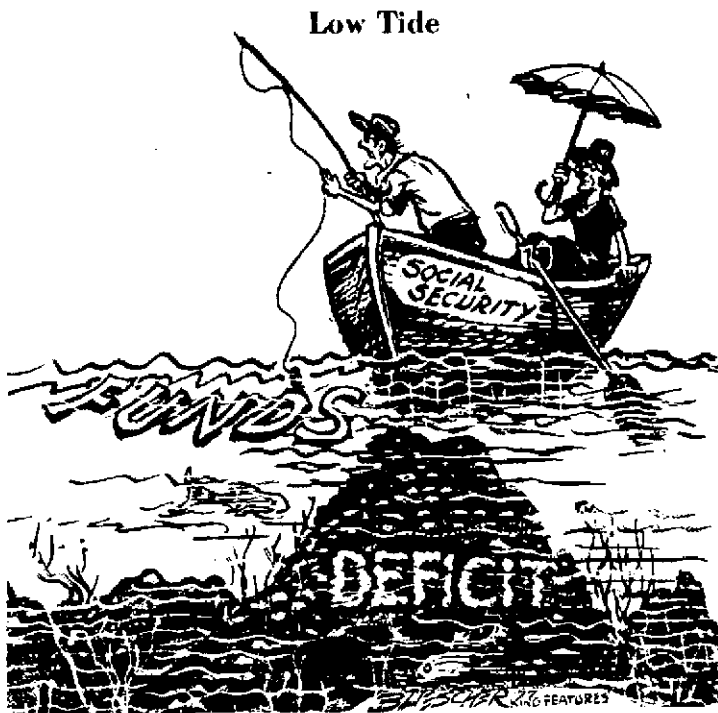

Whatever course India's new leadership embarks upon, it moves with the knowledge that Indian voters have grown to support democratic ideals and the rule of parliamentary decision rather than personal mandate.

That is what the voters said when they cast their ballots to retire the Indira Gandhi administration. Demonstrations against Gandhi's "emergency" suppression of civil liberties in the weeks preceding the election showed strong sentiments against the bizarre twist toward authoritarianism taken by the government following a court decision two years ago that ruled Gandhi guilty of engaging in illegal activities in a previous campaign.

Even so, it seemed to many observers that Indian voters were not ready to reject personal leadership and show majority support for rule by law. After all, wasn't India nurtured into freedom less than three decades ago by strong personalities like Mohandas Gandhi and Indira's father, Jawaharlal Nehru?

Nevertheless, until the Gandhi emergency decrees India had developed a strong, if sometimes erratic, parliamentary system. Indian voters acted not so much against the Congress Party as they did for a return to this system.

Congratulations to the Herald-Palladium and to the Keller Township firemen!

The photo and accompanying story on the front page of Monday's paper (March 21, 1977) proved that an act of kindness and caring can make its way into the paper, and land on the front page.

The public deserves a break from violence and death. Instead of reading reports of seal killing, whale killing, tuna killing, wildlife poaching, inhumane treatment to pets, etc., it's nice to realize that someone, somewhere, every once in a while, people recall that animals have feelings and needs just as they themselves do.

Thank you for the smiles on the faces of animal appreciators.

ANIMAL LOVER BACKS WARDEN

Editor,
This concerns the article about the dog warden who shot the dog. I am an animal lover myself, but I feel what that dog warden did was right. We have people who let their dogs run loose around where I live. We have had occasions when we used the dog warden's services. If a dog is left to run loose it can eventually get some type of a disease, like rabies. Dogs running loose will get into people's garbage which is set out for trash pick-up. I have run dogs away from our garbage at times.

If people cared enough about their dogs they would keep them tied up or kept in a pen. I myself, have two dogs, but I keep them in a pen and they both have been spayed. I cannot stand to see a dog running loose. Letting a dog run loose shows that the people loved the dog very little.

If people would start keeping their dogs tied up or kept in a pen, the dog warden would not have to kill so many. If more people would get their dogs neutered there would be fewer dogs around and less chance of dogs getting killed.

Like I said at the beginning of this, I am an animal lover, but I also like to protect animals and see them taken care of. So, the next time you decide to use the dog warden's services, forget it, if you are going to criticize them.

Recently this column called attention to the furor surrounding the alleged CIA funding of a book on Chile by the British scholar and political activist Robert Moss. As it turns out, there is a great deal more under this particular rock than first appeared.

Moss, a close advisor to British Tory leader Margaret Thatcher and, as I mentioned earlier, a personal friend of mine, writes to me as follows:

"Just a note to say that I have just seen one of your valiant defenses of me against the CIA slur. Many thanks. What has been going on is, of course, a prize example of Lenin's dictum that 'if you label something effectively, you don't have to argue with it.'"

"The allegation that the book series that published my Chile book was CIA funded has never been produced — and I do not believe that CIA money was ever involved, directly or indirectly."

"The smearers also find it convenient to omit that a dozen other British authors of distinction (e.g., Professor Max Beloff, Sir William Hayter, Sir Robert Thompson, Lord Gladwyn) published books in the same series; or that amongst the hundreds of contributors to Farm World Features (with which the series was connected) was Clement Attlee."

"Never mind: a front-page article in the (British) Guardian (by a journalist who has admitted to working with Philip Agee, whose previous articles on similar themes were spiked by a previous Guardian editor on the ground that 'he was not in business to do the work of the KGB' and whose previous research assistants include a man who was convicted and fined for stealing political documents from a private house) was enough to get the ball rolling."

"After that, all they have to do is follow Goebbels' advice: tell big lies, and repeat them over and over... There is indeed a story to be told; I am thinking of telling some of it myself in a book on disinformation. There is proof of the direct involvement of the KGB and the Cuban DGI in the whole affair. More of that when we see each other again — which I hope will be soon."

Other pieces begin to fit together here, though the total pattern is still far from clear. Thus, in its March 16 issue, an American periodical called the Guardian — not to be confused with the British paper of the same name — published a full-scale attack on Moss. Describing itself as an "independent radical newsweekly," the (U.S.) Guardian is Marxist with a generally Maoist coloration. From that perspective, Moss's book on Chile is "a pro Chilean junta fascist tract."

Asking "Who Is This Journalist," the (U.S.) Guardian article answers: "Robert Moss is an ordinary journalist; he exercises wide influence in the highest circles of British society. He works as a ghostwriter for British Conservative Party leader Margaret Thatcher, for whom he authored the famous 'Iron Maiden' foreign policy statement attacking the Soviet Union." Ah, yes.

It thus becomes clear that a concerted campaign is under way to smear this able and influential young writer, and, if possible, destroy his influence. Last September 21 in Washington, the Chilean exile and former diplomat Orlando Letelier was killed by a bomb. The contents of Letelier's briefcase, now known, indicate that he and the Trans National Institute, of which he was director, were deeply involved with a shadowy network of Cuban, East German, and Soviet contacts, and that he received direct payments from Havana.

The identity of Letelier's killers has not been established, but the Chilean intelligence service (DINA), the Cuban DGI, and rightist Cuban exiles have all been accused.

Stay tuned. In this league the boys play rough.

GOP Indulges In Sham, Too

WASHINGTON (NEA) — "A bribe," charged Rep. Charles Thone, a Lincoln, Neb., Republican. "It galls my hide," chimed in Rep. Robert H. Michel, a fellow Republican from Peoria, Ill. "This is simply unconscionable."

Added an equally outraged Rep. Bill Frenzel, a GOP legislator from the Minneapolis suburbs: "We are buying party for ourselves at a cost of $2.2 million to the American taxpayers."

All of that indignant talk on the floor of the House of Representatives recently could have led an innocent observer to believe that Congress was auctioning off whatever remained of the dignity of the Republic.

In fact, nothing quite that calamitous was happening. It was simply the Republicans' turn to engage in the sort of sham, hypocrisy and hyperbole which has brought disrepute to both major political parties.

The occasion was the House debate on a major package of ethics reforms developed by a special commission headed by Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis. Most of the public attention at the time focused on the controversy over a provision limiting the outside income of representatives.

But there also was a lively, although far less publicized, dispute over another section of the Obey package. It abolishes, effective early next year, all unofficial office accounts maintained by members of the House.

Some legislators have abused those accounts, turning them into secret "slush funds" to pay for personal expenses, but most congressmen have used the accounts as a "petty cash" fund to finance such quasi-official undertakings as the mailing of newsletters to constituents.

As a special inducement to representatives in the latter category, Obey's resolution coupled elimination of the unofficial office accounts with authorization for an additional $5,000 yearly for each legislator's official office account, to be used only for legitimate purposes in connection with their official duties.

To a man, the Republican insisted that they agreed with the goal of abolishing the clandestine "slush funds" — but they sanctimoniously insisted that the $5,000 bonus was unnecessary and outrageous, if not downright immoral.

The propriety of that payment is indeed open to question — but what the Republicans failed to mention at any time during the debate on the issue was the fact that virtually every GOP member of the House is a beneficiary of a special fund which annually has been doling out hundreds of thousands of dollars to their unofficial office accounts.

That money comes from the National Republican Congressional Committee, which last year poured more than $233,000 directly into often-secret office accounts to help House Republicans pay for mass mailings to their congressional districts.

Additional tens of thousands of dollars went to those same GOP legislators to pay for travel expenses, television tapes to garner free publicity, artwork for bumper stickers and a host of other items.

House Democrats have no similar arrangement, nor do either Republicans or Democrats in the Senate. The House Republicans apparently were concerned not about morality or propriety but rather the possibility that the proposed reform might bring an end to their exclusive and lucrative financial arrangement.

Their strategy was to make the reform highly unpopular by eliminating the "carrot" and leaving only the "stick," thereby attracting support from disgruntled Democrats for a move to retain "slush funds."

To a man, the Republican insisted that they agreed with the goal of abolishing the clandestine "slush funds" — but they sanctimoniously insisted that the $5,000 bonus was unnecessary and outrageous, if not downright immoral.

The propriety of that payment is indeed open to question — but what the Republicans failed to mention at any time during the debate on the issue was the fact that virtually every GOP member of the House is a beneficiary of a special fund which annually has been doling out hundreds of thousands of dollars to their unofficial office accounts.

That money comes from the National Republican Congressional Committee, which last year poured more than $233,000 directly into often-secret office accounts to help House Republicans pay for mass mailings to their congressional districts.

Additional tens of thousands of dollars went to those same GOP legislators to pay for travel expenses, television tapes to garner free publicity, artwork for bumper stickers and a host of other items.

House Democrats have no similar arrangement, nor do either Republicans or Democrats in the Senate. The House Republicans apparently were concerned not about morality or propriety but rather the possibility that the proposed reform might bring an end to their exclusive and lucrative financial arrangement.

Their strategy was to make the reform highly unpopular by eliminating the "carrot" and leaving only the "stick," thereby attracting support from disgruntled Democrats for a move to retain "slush funds."

Kite Flying Not Always Cheap Hobby

BY MIKE WYNGARDEN
Staff Writer

Spring kite flying no longer means taking a 100-yard dash into the March breeze with the traditional paper-covered, diamond-shaped kite and cloth tail in hand. While kite flying still remains a popular spring pastime, the objects soaring in area skies today are more likely to be made of plastic or nylon and resemble helicopters, hang gliders, airplanes, birds or butterflies.

"The kites available today are more artfully and aerodynamically designed," says Mike Yore, co-owner of the Emporium at 606 Ship street, St. Joseph, one of the stores in the area that offers the new variety of kites. "The new kites are more sophisticated and fly better."

Yore has 32 varieties of kites at his store with another 150 models that can be ordered from suppliers. Prices range from $3 for a kite resembling the classic "two-sticker" but is made of plastic and can be disassembled after use, to $30 for the "parafoil," a frameless kite made of parachute nylon that is inflated by the wind and requires a 100-pound test line for flying.

There is also a $240 hand-painted, imported model that can be ordered from a supplier, Yore said. There are several advantages to the new model kites, according to Yore. The kites no longer require tails, he said, and when ripped, the plastic-covered kites can be repaired with scotch tape or airplane glue.

The new kites also do not require a dash into the wind to get them airborne, according to Yore. They catch the wind and take off with a simple toss into the breeze.

Block Clubs Hike Safety For Elderly

Block clubs and other programs that involve elderly people in their communities are viewed by law enforcement officers as important crime fighting tools. "This program is essential," Benton Harbor Det. Lt. Al Edwards says of the city's 24 block clubs and other crime prevention activities. Crime prevention is necessary because "You don't get anywhere trying to prosecute (criminals) anymore," he says.

Edwards, head of his department's crime prevention unit, said block clubs are for everyone in a neighborhood, but the elderly are the greatest beneficiaries.

Joe Sieber, Benton township police chief, said there are more elderly people in block clubs because they are more concerned about their safety and more willing to cooperate with police. Edwards helped the township begin its block club program, Sieber said.

The Rev. Elbert Brown, pastor of St. Paul Baptist church, in Benton township, said "we look out for one another to prevent burglaries." Recognizing that "Wrongdoers feel like they have a better chance among the elderly," people in block clubs try to even the odds for the elderly, the Rev. Brown said.

St. Joseph Township police Chief Keith Mills likes the idea of block clubs because they keep the elderly in touch with their community. St. Joseph township doesn't have block clubs, but Mills would like to see a program started where a citizen would regularly contact elderly people. If the citizen couldn't locate the resident, he could call the police and have them investigate.

According to Edwards, block clubs offer the communication necessary to keep the elderly involved in their neighborhoods.

The Benton Harbor department's crime prevention unit uses block clubs to spread the word about prevention, crimes and, when it's helpful, to tell citizens how criminals are operating.

The senior citizens check, where police keep a list of people to be checked each day personally or by telephone, and operation identification, a burglary deterrent, are other police programs that are more effective when operated within the structure of block clubs, Edwards said.

Edwards said police will conduct a free security check of any house in the city. The officers who conduct the checks tell the homeowner how to beef up security against home breakers.

Det. Lt. Tom Cooper, of the St. Joseph police department, said the police occasionally speak to senior citizen groups in the city about security and personal safety. He said fortunately there is a low level of crime against senior citizens in St. Joseph.

Edwards encourages elderly people to call the police if they see anything that looks suspicious. "Let us decide if it's petty," he said.

Whitcomb Mortgage Held By Ohio Trust Company

By JERRY KRIEGER

A mortgage on the Whitcomb Tower retirement center in St. Joseph that may have led or contributed to the Chapter 11 bankruptcy receivership of Michigan Baptist Homes, Inc., is held by a Columbus, O., investment trust group.

The mortgage holder, unidentified last week when the Baptist Homes' plight was learned, is Nationwide Real Estate Investment Trust, 246 North High street, Columbus.

Olin Jones, director of properties for the trust, denied that mortgage foreclosure was "imminent." But he acknowledged the trust had discussed the mortgage several times in the past year with officials of Michigan Baptist Homes, and noted that foreclosure was "an alternative" to be considered as a means of collecting. He said some of the original $1.5 million mortgage had been paid, but declined to say how much.

Atty. Stuart Hertzberg of Detroit, legal counsel for the Whitcomb Tower owner, was reported last week as saying the threat of foreclosure of the Whitcomb mortgage was one of the factors in forcing the Chapter 11 proceedings. Hertzberg, however, told this newspaper last week that it was a severe cash crisis that forced the firm into receivership.

The action in the bankruptcy division of the Detroit federal district court put all four retirement centers operated in Michigan by Baptist Homes into receivership. In addition to Whitcomb Tower, the firm operated similar centers in Detroit, Ann Arbor and Grand Rapids.

Records at the Berrien county register of deeds indicate the mortgage was originally dated Feb. 29, 1972, and has since gone through several different holders.

Ex-SJ Man's Killer Sentenced

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A man who said he killed an acquaintance because he could no longer control his craving for heroin was sentenced Wednesday to life in prison.

Clayton W. Doyle was sentenced in Pima County Superior Court after being convicted of first-degree murder in the September 1976 killing of Rodney D. Hickmott, 21, formerly of St. Joseph, Mich.

Doyle also received a 20-to-40-year sentence for armed robbery and will not be eligible for parole for 25 years, said Judge Gilbert Veliz.

Doyle, 25, admitted in court he killed Hickmott because Hickmott owed him an ounce and a half of heroin but refused to pay the debt. Doyle said he shot Hickmott while the victim dozed on a couch.

Hickmott, formerly of 3544 Washington avenue, St. Joseph, was the son of Dee Hickmott of St. Joseph and Mrs. Nancy Hornmann of Kalamazoo.

He was reported to have lived in Tucson about three months.

Tucson police earlier said they were called to the Hickmott residence by a roommate, who told officers he feared the man had taken an overdose of drugs. Police found Hickmott dead with two bullet wounds in the back of the head.

POISON PREVENTION WEEK

Child Safety Advice

Behind every forbidden door, in every intriguing drawer, in all the nooks and crannies — the mystery of the unknown entices curious toddlers. Little do these tiny investigators realize the dangers of those colorful boxes, glistening bottles and sparkling objects lurking within those tantalizing places.

Today's busy homemaker finds it virtually impossible to keep a minute-by-minute watch over her young explorer. Her supervision is even more difficult because today's home contains 50 or more cabinets and drawers that can house dangerous products which are also within her youngster's reach.

Children under five were involved in 60 per cent of the poisoning cases reported to the National Clearinghouse for Poison Control Centers in 1975. One and two-year-olds, because of their inquisitive nature, sustained the majority of these internal injuries.

The leading cause of these accidents were soaps, detergents and cleaners, all easily accessible to toddlers. Following the leading cause were vitamins, aspirin, antihistamines and cold medicines, all commonly found in every home.

Also included on the list of substances most frequently swallowed by these children are perfumes, cosmetics, bleach and liquid polish.

Of course, these figures do not include the thousands of poisonings gone unreported, nor the thousands of accidental injuries to children from knives, matches, scissors, needles, pins, guns, garden and workshop tools, all found in and around today's home. The majority of these children will escape death with either tragic injuries or less serious results, but always there will be the memory of a frightening experience for both the parents and child.

When homes are considered, these figures become even more overwhelming. Because these products are used often, they are kept in easily-accessible places: under the kitchen sink, in handy cabinets and drawers in the bathroom, in closets and cupboards in the utility room, garage and many other convenient places.

Dowagiac Program, March 31

DOWAGIAC — Joys of Parenthood, in conjunction with Poison Prevention Month, will sponsor a child safety/poison prevention program Thursday, March 31, at 7:30 p.m. in the First United Methodist church, Dowagiac.

The program is sponsored as a public service at no admission charge. Refreshments will be served.

The program will include pointers as to what is poisonous, information on poison-proofing the home, and hints for traveling and visiting.

The films, "Protecting Young Lives" and "Teaching Children Poison Prevention," will be shown.

Free literature, including a poison antidote wheel and "Officer Ugg," stickers to place on poisonous products, will be available for those in attendance.

Joys of Parenthood is a non-profit, volunteer childbirth and parent education association which serves the southwestern Michigan area. The organization also sponsors periodic workshops on baby care and breastfeeding.

Parents have come to realize that the home environment which was once thought to be a safe and secure by parents in the early 1900s is, today, one of the most dangerous environments for all human beings — particularly children.

The National Planning Council for Poison Prevention has suggested the following nine steps to prevent child poisonings and accidents:

1. Keep hazardous household products such as detergents, bleaches, lyes, cleaners, medicine, etc., out of the reach and sight of children.
2. Store medicine separately from other household products and keep these items in their original containers — never in cups or soft-drink bottles.
3. Be sure all products are properly labeled and read the label before using.
4. Always turn the light on when taking or giving medications.
5. Avoid taking medication in the presence of children; remember, they always want to be just like Mommy and Daddy.
6. Refer to medication by their proper names. Medicines are not "candy," "goodies," "yummy-yums" or anything else.
7. Clean out medicine cabinets periodically. Throw away old medicine by flushing it down the toilet, rinsing out the container in water and discarding it.
8. Ask for and use household products which are available in child-resistant packages. Safety packaging gives extra protection to your children.
9. And, perhaps most important of all, keep all medicine, insect sprays, kerosene, lighter fluid, turpentine, paints, solvents and products containing lye and acids under lock and key.

POISON PREVENTION WEEK

Child Safety Advice

Behind every forbidden door, in every intriguing drawer, in all the nooks and crannies — the mystery of the unknown entices curious toddlers. Little do these tiny investigators realize the dangers of those colorful boxes, glistening bottles and sparkling objects lurking within those tantalizing places.

Today's busy homemaker finds it virtually impossible to keep a minute-by-minute watch over her young explorer. Her supervision is even more difficult because today's home contains 50 or more cabinets and drawers that can house dangerous products which are also within her youngster's reach.

Children under five were involved in 60 per cent of the poisoning cases reported to the National Clearinghouse for Poison Control Centers in 1975. One and two-year-olds, because of their inquisitive nature, sustained the majority of these internal injuries.

The leading cause of these accidents were soaps, detergents and cleaners, all easily accessible to toddlers. Following the leading cause were vitamins, aspirin, antihistamines and cold medicines, all commonly found in every home.

Also included on the list of substances most frequently swallowed by these children are perfumes, cosmetics, bleach and liquid polish.

Of course, these figures do not include the thousands of poisonings gone unreported, nor the thousands of accidental injuries to children from knives, matches, scissors, needles, pins, guns, garden and workshop tools, all found in and around today's home. The majority of these children will escape death with either tragic injuries or less serious results, but always there will be the memory of a frightening experience for both the parents and child.

When homes are considered, these figures become even more overwhelming. Because these products are used often, they are kept in easily-accessible places: under the kitchen sink, in handy cabinets and drawers in the bathroom, in closets and cupboards in the utility room, garage and many other convenient places.

Dowagiac Program March 31

DOWAGIAC — Joys of Parenthood, in conjunction with Poison Prevention Month, will sponsor a child safety/poison prevention program Thursday, March 31, at 7:30 p.m. in the First United Methodist church, Dowagiac.

The program is sponsored as a public service at no admission charge. Refreshments will be served.

The program will include pointers as to what is poisonous, information on poison-proofing the home, and hints for traveling and visiting.

The films, "Protecting Young Lives" and "Teaching Children Poison Prevention," will be shown.

Free literature, including a poison antidote wheel and "Officer Ugg," stickers to place on poisonous products, will be available for those in attendance.

Joys of Parenthood is a non-profit, volunteer childbirth and parent education association which serves the southwestern Michigan area. The organization also sponsors periodic workshops on baby care and breastfeeding.

Parents have come to realize that the home environment which was once thought to be a safe and secure by parents in the early 1900s is, today, one of the most dangerous environments for all human beings — particularly children.

The National Planning Council for Poison Prevention has suggested the following nine steps to prevent child poisonings and accidents.

1. Keep hazardous household products such as detergents, bleaches, lyes, cleaners, medicine, etc., out of the reach and sight of children.

2. Store medicine separately from other household products and keep these items in their original containers — never in cups or soft-drink bottles.

3. Be sure all products are properly labeled and read the label before using.

4. Always turn the light on when taking or giving medications.

5. Avoid taking medication in the presence of children; remember, they always want to be just like Mommy and Daddy.

6. Refer to medication by their proper names. Medicines are not "candy," "goodies," "yum-yums" or anything else.

7. Clean out medicine cabinets periodically. Throw away old medicine by flushing it down the toilet, rinsing out the container in water and discarding it.

8. Ask for and use household products which are available in child-resistant packages. Safety packaging gives extra protection to your children.

9. And, perhaps most important of all, keep all medicine, insect sprays, kerosene, lighter fluid, turpentines, paints, solvents and products containing lye and acids under lock and key.

Sewing Hints

By DOROTHY KING

Chevron's are made by cutting plaids and stripes on the bias.

Try to select a pattern illustrated with chevron on the envelope front because the pattern pieces will have a chevron grain line and layout plan to follow.

To get a chevron effect with a balanced plaid, there must be a bias seam where the chevron can appear. For a chevron in an unbalanced plaid, the fabric must be reversible.

Cottons, linens and other stripe and plaid fabrics can be used to make a chevron at the

seamline, but I prefer knits because the give in the knit helps make matching easier.

Plaids, cut on the bias, create a beautiful fashion look when they are properly done. There is something dramatic about plaids in a diagonal pattern on a skirt or dress. But, if you are a beginner, stick with simple stripes to create your chevron until you feel you are ready for plaids.

Chevron's are very interesting and always in style.

Benefit Event Sunday

Sewing Hints

By DOROTHY KING

Chevron are made by cutting plaids and stripes on the bias.

Try to select a pattern illustrated with chevrons on the envelope front because the pattern pieces will have a chevron grain line and layout plan to follow.

Cottons, linens and other stripe and plaid fabrics can be used to make a chevron at the

seamline, but I prefer knits because the give in the knit helps make matching easier.

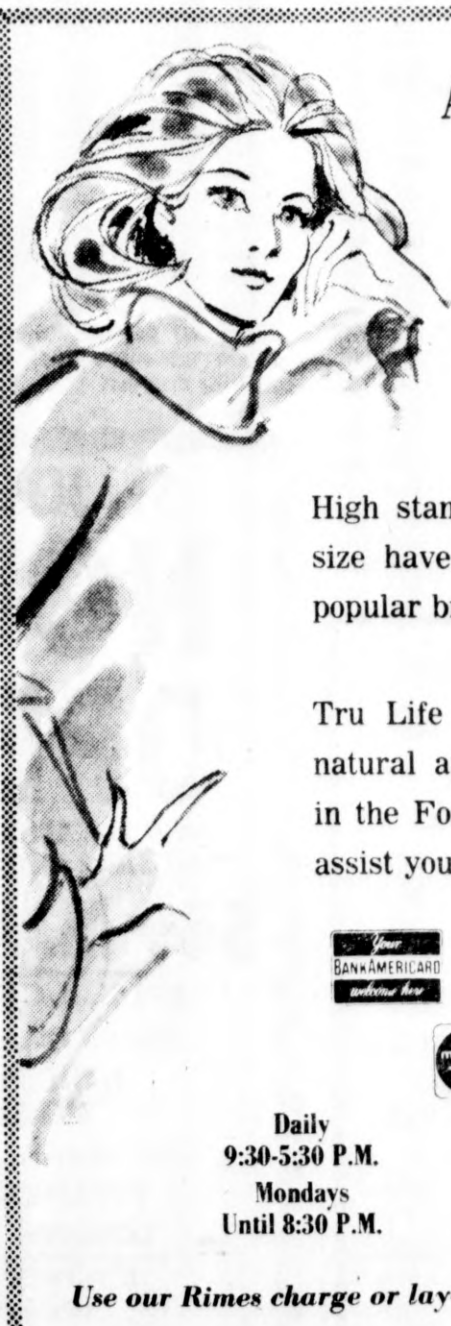

Plaids, cut on the bias, create a beautiful fashion look when they are properly done. There is something dramatic about plaids in a diagonal pattern on a skirt or dress. But, if you are a beginner, stick with simple stripes to create your chevron until you feel you are ready for plaids.

Chevrons are very interesting and always in style.

ATTENTION! Future Brides

Brides-to-be planning engagement announcements and wedding stories in this newspaper are asked to observe the following rules:

Engagement and wedding forms are available in the women's department at The Herald-Palladium offices in Benton Harbor or St. Joseph. The pertinent information should be typed or plainly printed in filling out these forms to prevent errors.

Wedding forms should be picked up at least two weeks and turned in one week before the wedding is to take place.

When wedding information is sent within two months of the engagement announcement date, only ONE picture will be run. The bride-to-be may have her choice.

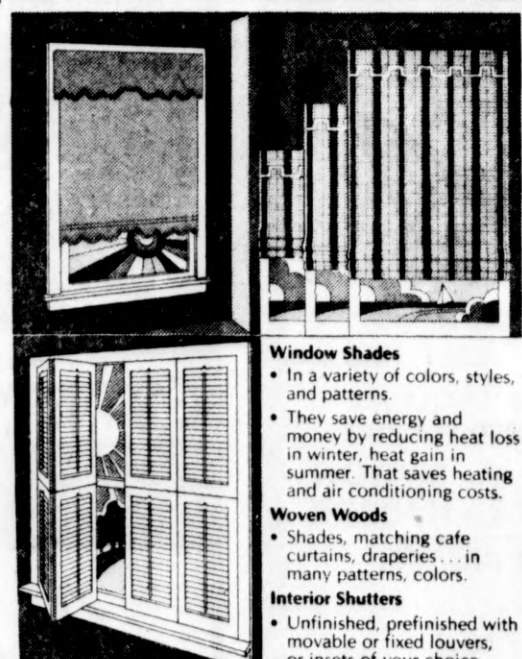

Use proper names — not nicknames. In wedding information, use husband's names for married attendants.

Only pictures of the bride in her wedding dress will be used. Formal glossy black and white portraits are preferred.

Engagement and wedding pictures are usually available at this newspaper office after publication for a short time.

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers

Maybe This Will Save A Wife

Dear Ann: The enclosed clipping is from an AA publication, "The Grapevine." Maybe it will save a wife, somewhere, from going through the hell I suffered six years ago when my husband became impotent. I am still struggling to overcome the suspicion, guilt, remorse, zero self-esteem, and outrage.

My husband continues to drink, but by the grace of God I no longer punish myself because of it. I now follow a program of "One day at a time," and it is helping me become a complete person again. — Recovering

ALCOHOL AND VIRILITY
By Lawrence K. Altman, N.Y. Times

Prolonged drinking of alcohol, which alters male sexual behavior, accomplishes these changes by stimulating the liver to drastically step up its destruction of the male sex hormone, according to results of a scientific study.

Toxic effects of the alcohol led the liver to produce up to five times the amount of the liver enzyme that normally breaks down testosterone, the male sex hormone.

The research was done at the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine, in New York, The Bronx Veteran's Hospital, and N.Y. Medical College. The volunteers drank a pint of 86 proof whiskey every day for four weeks.

Dr. Emanuel Rubin, a pathologist at Mt. Sinai, said, "The findings go a long way toward explaining the sex problems of alcoholics. This effect is produced by alcohol in ANY form — whiskey, wine or beer. The total amount of alcohol is the only thing that counts."

Dear Recovering (And Mr. Altman): Thank you for providing scientific documentation of what I have been saying in this space for years. Understanding the cause of a problem can be the first step toward solving it.

Comeuppance

Dear Ann Landers: Your recent advice to the 11-year-old girl with the space between her two front teeth was very good. However, I think you were wrong to say, "Ask your mother to take you to the dentist." Her father could take her.

My wife and I are seeing to it that our young daughter is growing up with an awareness that she can be a dentist if she wants to. We are also raising our son to know that he can be a parent if he wants to.

Keep up the good work and sign me — A Father Who Cares
Dear Father: Thanks for the comeuppance, Dad, I deserve it.

With Friends

Dear Ann Landers: I am going to be an unwed mother in about six months and need to know how to deal with nosy relatives and friends.

I feel it is best not to keep the baby and have already made plans to go to a home for unwed mothers in another part of the state.

This is a small, gossip town. What should I say when I return and am questioned about where I have been? — Reputation At Stake

Dear Rep: Do you have friends or relatives out of the city? Spend a few days with them either before or after — and that's where you've been.

How to — and how much? Find out with Ann Landers's new booklet, "How, What, and When to Tell Your Child About Sex." For your copy, send 50 cents in coin along with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Dr. Lester Coleman

Twice I've gone below the border on a holiday, and twice I've had my vacation ruined with severe abdominal cramps and diarrhea. Although I ate the same food that was eaten by the native friends I was visiting, they were unaffected by it. Can you explain this? — Miss J.E., Calif. Dear Miss E.:

It is well known that certain people can develop an immunity to the microbes that produce severe diarrhea in others. Newcomers to an area who have not developed such an immunity can be stricken with severe abdominal symptoms.

It is generally accepted that bouts of diarrhea such as you described are usually associated with contaminated water, poor sanitation, inadequate sewage disposal and carelessness about personal hygiene.

When one comes from a well-controlled, hygienic area and is exposed to toxic microbes and chemicals in a new environment, there are very specific rules to be followed.

Drink only bottled water. A hidden danger lies in ice that may be contaminated. Even brushing the teeth should be done with bottled water. ()

Avoid all raw fruits and vegetables. Lettuce is particularly hazardous because the soil on which it grows is so frequently contaminated. Fruits that can be peeled are considered safe to eat.

Tourists are often tempted by exotic native foods. Only the lucky ones seem able to manage this. In general, it is a safe rule to avoid these dishes.

Visitors should come prepared with one of the many drugs that are now available and prescribed by doctors. They can quickly check intestinal upsets.

Since you have had two unpleasant experiences, why not consider holidaying north of the border next time?

Is there a greater advantage to taking a vitamin by injection than by mouth? — Mr. E.A., Conn.

Dear Mr. A.: In most instances, injections of vitamins are given when patients are unable to comfortably take them by mouth.

After an operation, or because of some intestinal disorder, vitamins and all other kinds of medication may, for a while, be given by injection.

In some instances, patients may have a special defect and an inability to absorb vitamins from the stomach or intestines.

Here, too, injections are substituted.

The concentration of vitamins by mouth is often just as effective, and lasts just as long as vitamins by injection.

Easy Fish Dish

Busy day? Hungry family? Reach for the cupboard and the freezer for a quick and easy casserole that everyone will enjoy.

Prepare one package (ten ounces) frozen mixed vegetables according to package directions; drain. Add one can (fifteen ounces) New England style clam chowder and one-fourth cup milk and pour mixture into a shallow casserole.

Cover and bake at 425 degrees for ten minutes. Arrange one package (nine ounces) frozen pre-cooked fish sticks on top and bake about twelve minutes, or until fish sticks are browned and crisp. Makes three servings.

with only one ace and two potential losers in diamonds. On the other hand, he did have full values plus, in spite of holding just one ace, and therefore passed to show this good hand.

Now South did a little thinking on his own. He said to himself: "My partner has opened the bidding with only one ace and does not want to discourage me. He must have the right three kings so South went all the way to seven hearts."

It is interesting to note that West's desperate bid boomeranged against him. Left to themselves it is doubtful if North and South would have gone past six.

Ask the Jacobys

Continuing yesterday's answer, the Texas convention is the first of the transfer bids. In response to a one- or two-trump opening bid, the jump to four diamonds asks partner to bid four hearts. The jump to four hearts asks partner to bid four spades. A typical Texas transfer in response to a one no-trump would be a four heart bid with:

♠ A Q x x x x ♥ x ♦ x x x x ♣ x x

Responder wants to play four spades and also wants his partner to be declarer.

What happens when someone really interferes with Blackwood by sticking in a defensive bid at the six or possibly the seven level?

Here you can't use the double to show no aces, the pass to show one and the bid to show more because there are lots of hands where responder will hold two aces and he won't be sure that they are enough for a slam.

Here we recommend that the double say: "Partner, I don't want to bid any more." The pass say: "Partner, go ahead." And the bid say: "Partner, I really like my hand."

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
As long as you rely on your common sense today, you'll do all right. Ignore hunches or premonitions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
Be satisfied today with small profits and steady gains. Reach too far for the brass ring and you may come back with a fistful of air.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Your appraisal today is more on the mark than that of one you're closely involved with, who's too much a dreamer. You should have final say.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
You should go out of your way today to aid one who is willing to try hard. Conversely, shun those who'd let you do all the work.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
Some unkind things regarding someone you're fond of may be voiced in your presence today. It will be up to you to set the record straight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
You may be a bit shaky in competitive situations today. Act brave. I'm sure your insecurity will vanish.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)
Normally your diplomacy does the job for you, but not so today. You may have to hammer your points home hard.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22)
Joint ventures should be successful today, provided no one gets more than their share. You could be bitter if you feel you're being short-changed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21)
Today, you see things as they are. However, you may lack the courage to act in your own behalf.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
Be singular of purpose today. Keep things in order of priority. If you vacillate, you'll cut your productivity in half.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)
A sensitive friend's feelings will be wounded if she's not included in your social plans today. She should be first to get an invitation.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20)
Look around today, for you could turn a nifty little profit as a middleman. It's possible you could bring a buyer and seller together.

March 25, 1977
Several persons you thought had left your life will be reunited with you this year. All parties will be happy to renew the friendships.

Loses Half Body...And Lawsuit, Too

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Allen Aaron Jackson enlisted in the Army to be trained as an automobile mechanic. Instead, at 21, his body was cut in half by a tank.

A federal court on Wednesday said it "deeply sympathizes" with Jackson, but it can't order the government to pay damages to him.

Jackson had sued for breach of contract, claiming he was promised two things by a recruiter: he would get mechanic's training; he would not be assigned to dangerous duty.

The Army says there was no such promise, at least not in writing. And even if there had been, the recruiter had no authority to make it and therefore it's not binding.

In May 1974, four months after he enlisted, Jackson took part in maneuvers at Ft. Riley, Kan. A tank ran over him. The lower half of his body, navel on down, had to be amputated.

Jackson's lawyers could not sue for negligence; the Supreme Court has said it knows of no law that permits a soldier to recover damages on that ground. The lawyers chose the unusual claim that there was breach of the enlistment contract and asked $5 million damages.

The U.S. Court of Claims on Wednesday issued its decision in case No. 259-76, Allen Aaron Jackson v. The United States.

The court said it made a thorough, careful and comprehensive review "in view of the shocking severity of the plaintiff's injuries," but said it could find nothing in the enlistment papers that prevented the Army from using Jackson in training exercises.

"The court deeply sympathizes with the plaintiff for the severe injury he received while serving our country in the United States Army," said the judges. "However, the court is without jurisdiction, authority or power to grant him any relief. It may be that he could get help from Congress...."

Since that awful day in Kansas, Jackson has undergone 28 operations. He is now in the Hines (Ill.) Veterans Administration hospital being fitted for a prosthesis.

"He can sit up in a bucket which holds him rigid," says his father, Raymond, a Chicago bus driver. "When he dresses up in the prosthetic it will look like he's whole, but actually he's half. When he sits up he'll look like a whole man, that's about it."

The Army discharged Jackson and the Veterans Administration sends him $1,700 a month disability pay. It is small compensation.

"He had a girlfriend. She disappeared out of the picture," says his father. "He has only a couple of the friends he had, only a couple who have been true blue to him. All the pals he used to pal around with... all he's got is family."

On weekends, Raymond Jackson brings his son home to Elmhurst, Ill.

"It's not the easiest thing in the world to see half a body," the father says, despair in his voice. "He has gone through a hell of a lot. He had a breach of contract. He enlisted to go into auto mechanics — according to newsreels and broadcasts stating 'enlist and you can have anything you want.'"

Lawyer Ronald Pinski, a member of the legal team that brought the suit, said the Court of Claims decision probably will be appealed.

Loses Half Body...And Lawsuit, Too

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Allen Aaron Jackson enlisted in the Army to be trained as an automobile mechanic. Instead, at 21, his body was cut in half by a tank.

The Army says there was no such promise, at least not in writing. And even if there had been, the recruiter had no authority to make it and therefore it's not binding.

In May 1974, four months after he enlisted, Jackson took part in maneuvers at Ft. Riley, Kan. A tank ran over him. The lower half of his body, navel on down, had to be amputated. Jackson's lawyers could not sue for negligence; the Supreme Court has said it knows of no law that permits a soldier to recover damages on that ground. The lawyers chose the unusual claim that there was breach of the enlistment contract and asked $5 million damages.

The U.S. Court of Claims on Wednesday issued its decision in case No. 259-76, Allen Aaron Jackson v. The United States.

The court said it made a thorough, careful and comprehensive review "in view of the shocking severity of the plaintiff's injuries," but said it could find nothing in the enlistment papers that prevented the Army from using Jackson in training exercises.

"The court deeply sympathizes with the plaintiff for the severe injury he received while serving our country in the United States Army," said the judges. "However, the court is without jurisdiction, authority or power to grant him any relief. It may be that he could get help from Congress...."

Since that awful day in Kansas, Jackson has undergone 28 operations. He is now in the Hines (Ill.) Veterans Administration hospital being fitted for a prosthesis.

"He can sit up in a bucket which holds him rigid," says his father, Raymond, a Chicago bus driver. "When he dresses up in the prosthetic it will look like he's whole, but actually he's half. When he sits up he'll look like a whole man, that's about it."

The Army discharged Jackson and the Veterans Administration sends him $1,700 a month disability pay. It is small compensation.

"He had a girlfriend. She disappeared out of the picture," says his father. "He has only a couple of the friends he had, only a couple who have been true blue to him. All the pals he used to pal around with ... all he's got is family."

On weekends, Raymond Jackson brings his son home to Elmhurst, Ill.

"It's not the easiest thing in the world to see half a body," the father says, despair in his voice. "He has gone through a hell of a lot. He had a breach of contract. He enlisted to go into auto mechanics — according to newsreels and broadcasts stating 'enlist and you can have anything you want.'"

Lawyer Ronald Pinski, a member of the legal team that brought the suit, said the Court of Claims decision probably will be appealed.

Young Thieves Vs. Oldsters: 'Cats Watching Birds'

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Detectives Jerry Keegan and Donald Gaffney slide into their squad car, a retired yellow taxi cab that starts with a groan and runs with a death rattle.

There's no siren, no siren, no radio. They take a folder of crime reports, a book of mug shots, a fingerprinting kit and a camera.

They're part of the Bronx Senior Citizens Robbery Unit, a prototype police group that investigates crimes against people over 60 who are attacked in buildings. There are similar units in other parts of the city.

They use the taxi because it's unobtrusive. It looks like a lot of other taxis in the Bronx. Many old people are embarrassed to be pinpointed as crime victims by the presence of a police car. Some fear reprisal.

Keegan and Gaffney cruise the Grand Concourse, a stately canyon of buildings that has become a combat zone for old people and young muggers.

"See that park?" Gaffney asks. "In nice weather, the old people come out and sun themselves. You can see the kids watching them, circling at a distance, picking out their quarry."

"You can spot it right off. Like cats watching birds. It's unnatural for young people to be that interested in old folks."

Wearing civilian clothes, the two hefty veterans are on their way to interview crime victims. They also take pictures of injuries, useful evidence if the victim recovers by the time the case goes to trial.

In most other robbery cases, the victim is asked to go to a precinct to view suspects' pictures. But Keegan and Gaffney visit victims at their homes or hospital beds.

Individual attention is the key to their approach. After an attack, old people are especially distraught. It takes patience to draw out their story.

Perhaps they will have a cup

"Most are so amazed anyone takes an interest," Keegan says. "We still get Christmas cards from people we've visited."

They enter the hospital room of 79-year-old Sarah (she doesn't want her real name used) whose spine was broken by three burglars she surprised in her apartment. She had just returned from buying birthday cards for her grandchildren.

Gaffney and Keegan take her fingerprints to compare with those they lifted in the apartment.

Lying there large, pale and frail, she tells them she had two rolls of pennies in her little bank. Did they break her Japanese vase? Was there a tin of papers from her cedar chest? She puts her inky fingerprinted hand to her forehead and cries.

Gaffney, pointing to one highrise. That one building housed eight kids who committed crimes against old people who later died of injuries.

They head toward another hospital, another old lady, Lattie. "I'd really like to get the guy who did this one," Keegan says.

Lattie, who also is afraid to have her real name in print, has no family, just a cousin in New Jersey. They're visiting her to say that her mail will be held at the post office — and to give her a little company.

She's 88, a tiny, outraged mass of bruises. Her nose is broken, her eyes are blackened, her neck is purple, her hands are wounded.

She was pushed into her apartment when she opened the door. She was beaten with her own walking cane. She was tied to a steam pipe.

"He kept beating me and asking, 'Where is the money? Where is the money?' I told him I didn't have any, just the $5 in my pockets. But he thought there was more," she said.

Lattie feels the bumps on her head and points to her nose. "Oh, why did he have to break my nose? Now I'll look like a prize fighter. I don't care how old I am, I don't want to have a broken nose.

"I hope you get him." She keeps pounding a fist into her palm. "I know I can identify him. Please get him."

Keegan and Gaffney leave, sickened, despite all the years of bruises and beatings they've seen.

They get back into the taxi. Another case. Another old lady. Another mugging.

"Oh, why don't they leave us alone? We don't have much longer to live. I've been in that apartment 40 years. But I can't go back now. But where can I go?"

"When you're old, nobody wants you."

There's nothing much to say. They think they've got good prints of the attackers. "We think we'll get someone," says Gaffney.

With a small burst of fire, Sarah says: "They should do to them what they did to me." She sinks back.

On the way out, they shake their heads. Gaffney mentions his own mother. He wants her to move out of her neighborhood, but, like many old people, she's very independent.

Back in the taxi, Keegan says: "This beating will change that woman's life, all her patterns and her outlook. If it happened to us, we would get over it. She won't."

"And, you know," says Gaffney, "there's really nothing we can do for her. It's done. We just hope we catch someone and prevent this happening again."

They estimate that each person they arrest, is responsible for 60 crimes against old people a year. "They're addicted to old people. Not hubeabs, not liquor stores. Just old people," says Keegan. "They're hoping to hit a pot of gold."

And, say the cops, most are remorseless. They go to court, get slapped on the wrists, get out and do it again.

The taxi rumbles past blocks of rubble and gutted tenements, blocks of housing developments. "Look. It's no wonder," says

Key House Committee Okays Lower PBB Limits

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Legislation to drastically reduce the permitted level of PBB in Michigan meat and dairy products won approval in a key House committee Wednesday.

The Appropriations Committee voted 11-3 for the measure, despite lengthy testimony from two Michigan State University

scientists that PBB poses no health problem and lowering the tolerance levels is not necessary.
The measure goes to the full House. Gov. William Milliken has urged the legislature to lower PBB standards, and has pressured the Agriculture Commission, which has in the past refused to act, into supporting the change.

The bill, sponsored by Rep.
Francis Spaniola, D-Corunna, would:

—Lower the permissible PBB levels in meat and dairy products from the federal Food and Drug Administration standard of 300 parts per billion to 20 parts per billion.

—Authorize the state to test animals and reimburse farmers for the destruction of cattle required by the lower standards.

Spaniola estimates about 18,000 livestock will have to be destroyed under the tougher standards. The bill includes about $26 million to test the animals and pay off farmers.

Agriculture officials say far more animals may have to be destroyed, and that could cost the state more than $40 million.

Under the measure, the state would have to go to court to get its money back from Michigan
Chemical Co., which produced
PBB, and the Michigan Farm Bureau, which accidentally mixed the toxic fire-retardant chemical with livestock feed in 1973.

The committee rejected several amendments from Republican members before approving the bill as Spaniola wrote it. One would have set a 50 parts-per-billion standard and permitted cows showing higher PBB levels to continue producing milk, as long as the milk was below the new standard.

The committee also heard from two MSU scientists who said they have been unable to link PBB contamination to illness in animals or humans.

"We cannot conclude PBB is a potent poison," said Robert Cook, a dairy science professor.
"It just isn't."

Steve Aust, an MSU professor and biochemist, said the FDA standard of 300 parts per billion "is perfectly reasonable — that level has been set with a large safety margin." And he said no livestock exist with high levels of PBB. He said food on the market is safe.

"The chances of a problem are going away daily," he said.
"The problem is disappearing while we sit around arguing about it."

But Spaniola pointed out that legislative committees have received contradictory testimony on the possible dangers of PBB, and said lawmakers must be cautious. "If we err, we err on the side of safety," he said. "I hope they're right —

there is no problem."

The scientists did not address the question of human health. A November study by Dr. Irving Selikoff of New York tentatively linked health problems among farm families to PBB.

Murder Trial Of VA Nurses Starts Monday

DETROIT (AP) — A panel of 16 jurors has been sworn in for the trial of two Filipina nurses accused of murdering and poisoning patients at the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration
Hospital in 1975.

U.S. District Court Judge
Philip Pratt scheduled the trial to start Monday at 9 a.m.

Pratt did not sequester the jurors, who were selected from 138 persons interviewed in 3½ weeks. But he instructed the 12 jurors and four alternates to avoid reading, seeing or hearing news accounts of the trial, and told them not to discuss about the case with anyone.

The two nurses — Leonora
Perez, 32, and Filipina Narciso, 30 — said Wednesday as they
that they were pleased with the panel and expected a fair trial.

They are charged with using Pavulon, a strong muscle-relaxant drug, to murder two patients and poison seven others at the hospital in July and August 1975. They are also charged with one count of conspiracy. Both women have maintained they are innocent.

The women worked in the hospital's intensive care unit in the summer of 1975, when more than 50 mysterious breathing failures occurred.

The women were dismissed from their nursing jobs at the hospital when they were arrested by the FBI last June 16. They were jailed for two weeks, and have been free on $75,000 bonds since then.

"We're nervous, like anyone else (would be)," said Miss Narciso, of Ypsilanti.

"But we're anxious to get it over and get it done so we can get back to nursing," said Mrs.
Perez, who lives with her husband and two sons in Ann Arbor.

The crimes they are charged with carry maximum penalties of life in prison. Since they are citizens of the Philippine Islands, the women also face possible deportation if convicted.

The jury is comprised of 10 women and six men. Two of the women are black and several jurors identified themselves as Polish. One man said his wife's family came to this country from Mexico, according to court records.

Among the occupations listed by jurors are security guard, teacher, housewife, minister and cook. One juror said he was unemployed.

A defense attorney said he was pleased with the final jury selection.

The Detroit Free Press reported the husband of a former VA Hospital nursing supervisor gave the FBI permission to review his dead wife's psychiatric records for information they may contain about the VA case.

Zaire Jets Bomb Invaders

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Zaire air force jets bombed the headquarters of invading Katangan exiles, a government source said, as the United States withheld further emergency aid to President Mobutu Sese Seko in the hope that Nigeria might mediate an end to the fighting. The source said two air force Mirage jets dropped four tons of bombs Wednesday on Kisenge, in southwest Shaba province, and did heavy damage. The source said the town is the operational headquarters and supply center for the estimated 2,000 exiles from neighboring Angola who invaded Shaba on March 8. Shaba was called Katanga when Zaire was the Congo. The railroad town of Dilola on the Angolan border was also reported bombed, but there was no report on the damage there. In addition to Dilola and Kisenge, the invaders control Kapanga, 155 miles northeast of Dilola and 45 miles from the border; Sanda, between Kapanga and Dilola, and the crossroads town of Kasaji, 50 miles east of Dilola and 130 miles west of Kolwezi, the copper-mining center of the province.

Prime Minister Sworn In

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Morarji Desai, an 81-year-old veteran of the Indian independence movement and former leader of the Congress party, was sworn in as India's fourth prime minister today. His 59-year-old predecessor, Indira Gandhi, was not present for the three-minute ceremony in the ornate Ashoka Hall of the presidential palace. But she was one of the first to send congratulations to the longtime foe who led his new Janata party to a stunning election triumph over her and the Congress party last weekend. Having lost her seat in Parliament in the election, Mrs. Gandhi became a private citizen. However, her successor as the Congress leader in Parliament, Y.B. Chavan, said she would continue to take a leading part in the party. Acting President B.D. Jatti swore in Desai as head of the new government three hours after the members of the new Parliament from his party unanimously approved him as their leader.

Laws Help Consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you are a struggling musician trying to pay for your leased clarinet, or if you can't get credit simply because of your color or religion or because you're over 65, you may find comfort in two new consumer laws. The Consumer Leasing Act, one of the two laws taking effect today, is designed to make leasing companies let customers know exactly the terms of their lease contracts before they sign on the dotted line. The second new consumer protection law extends three-year-old prohibitions against credit discrimination on the basis of sex or marital status.

Plans 'Boom Town' Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A plan to aid America's "energy boom towns" is under consideration at the White House because President Carter fears abrupt growth is bringing a drastic decline in the quality of local housing, medical care or school facilities. Areas involved in new coal development — mainly Western states — would benefit from such a program. Coastal states, undergoing sudden oil development, already have a boom town aid program. A draft of the President's energy message being prepared for delivery to Congress reveals Carter's concern that services in boom towns "frequently become completely inadequate" to meet community needs.

Vietnam Talks Will Resume

WASHINGTON (AP) — New talks between the United States and Vietnam will focus at first on establishing an economic relationship, probably starting with an end to the American trade embargo, State Department officials say. President Carter announced Wednesday that a U.S. delegation will resume talks with Vietnamese officials in Paris in an effort to establish friendly and normal relations between the two nations. In making the announcement, Carter cited success by the commission sent to Vietnam to look into Americans still listed as missing in action. He said the talks also were being resumed at Hanoi's request. "There are no preconditions requested and there will certainly be no preconditions on our part," the President said of the new talks. But State Department experts say development of relations with Vietnam will be in careful stages similar to the process under way with China.

British Laborites Rebel

LONDON (AP) — An unprecedented alliance with the Liberal party saved Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor government from defeat on a no-confidence motion, but the Labor party's left wing rebelled today against the linkup. Some 80 left-wing Laborites signed a letter to Callaghan declaring they would not be bound by his agreement to give the middle-of-the-road Liberals a voice in shaping government policy during the four months remaining in the current session of Parliament. The deal also split Callaghan's cabinet. At least four ministers opposed it, including leftist Energy Secretary Tony Benn and Environment Secretary Peter Shore. Labor's left wing has been increasingly critical of the government's restraints on wages and its curtailment of government spending, both policies that the Liberals favor. Labor's left is also traditionally opposed to pacts with other parties.

SURVIVES CONFIDENCE VOTE: Britain's Prime Minister James Callaghan waves to a small crowd gathered outside his official residence at Number 10 Downing Street Wednesday night, shortly after the Labor government survived a no-confidence vote. The Labor government obtained a 24-vote majority, but had to seek the aid of the tiny British Liberal Party to survive the balloting, in the House of Commons. (AP Wirephoto)

Timothy disappeared a week ago on a trip to a neighborhood drug store. The boy's mother positively identified the body at the Wayne County morgue.

Tobin said the body was found Tuesday night in a ditch 359 feet inside Wayne County's limits and was identified tentatively on the basis of the clothes the boy wore. Nearby was a skateboard.

He said there were no visible violent marks found on the body at the scene. The police chief said the body still was warm when found and investigating officers first called the fire department, hoping the child could be revived.

Ronald Ellis, 38, was released on his own recognizance after demanding preliminary examination on a charge of malicious destruction of property over $100. A March 29 hearing was ordered.

State police at Niles, who originally handled the case, said the damaged car belonged to Daniel Cox, Niles. Troopers said the windshield was broken by a lead pipe following an argument between Cox and another man Jan. 8.

Police said the car at the time was parked on Oak street, Keeler township.

Milliken requested that Branch, Clinton, Mecosta, Alcona and Saginaw counties be added to the disaster declaration. He said combined crop damage in the five counties is estimated at $12.7 million.

Sheriff Facing Legal Test

HART, Mich. (AP) — The Oceana County sheriff faces a legal test of authority next week when the Michigan Employment Relations Commission holds hearings on charges of unfair labor practices brought against him by two former deputies. Also at issue in the hearings in Grand Rapids will be restraints of power that sheriffs across the state have in making appointments to their staffs. Similar practices are being disputed in 46 other Michigan counties, said the attorney for deputies who have brought charges against John Simmons. The Fraternal Order of Police (FOP), on behalf of two Oceana County deputies whom Simmons did not reappoint when he took office in January, is charging Simmons with discrimination in hiring in order to discourage union memberships. Simmons contends the pair was not reappointed because of incompetence, not because of political reasons.

Capt. Richard Chlebek, South Bend police detective, identified the man as Kenneth Pope, 26. He said Pope was shot during an argument with another man in the tavern parking lot on the west side of the city at 1:35 a.m. Chlebek said companions of Pope took him to Pawating for treatment. Zaire Jets Bomb Invaders

KINSHASA, Zaire (AP) — Zaire air force jets bombed the headquarters of invading Katangan exiles, a government source said, as the United States withheld further emergency aid to President Mobutu Sese Seko in the hope that Nigeria might mediate an end to the fighting. The source said two air force Mirage jets dropped four tons of bombs Wednesday on Kisenge, in southwest Shaba province, and did heavy damage. The source said the town is the operational headquarters and supply center for the estimated 2,000 exiles from neighboring Angola who invaded Shaba on March 8. Shaba was called Katanga when Zaire was the Congo. The railhead town of Dilolo on the Angolan border was also reported bombed, but there was no report on the damage there. In addition to Dilolo and Kisenge, the invaders control Kapanga, 155 miles northeast of Dilolo and 45 miles from the border; Sandoa, between Kapanga and Dilolo, and the crossroads town of Kasaji, 80 miles east of Dilolo and 130 miles west of Kolwezi, the copper-mining center of the province.

Prime Minister Sworn In

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Morarji Desai, an 81-year-old veteran of the Indian independence movement and former leader of the Congress party, was sworn in as India's fourth prime minister today. His 59-year-old predecessor, Indira Gandhi, was not present for the three-minute ceremony in the ornate Ashoka Hall of the presidential palace. But she was one of the first to send congratulations to the longtime foe who led his new Janata party to a stunning election triumph over her and the Congress party last weekend. Having lost her seat in Parliament in the election, Mrs. Gandhi became a private citizen. However, her successor as the Congress leader in Parliament, Y.B. Chavan, said she would continue to take a leading part in the party. Acting President B.D. Jatti swore in Desai as head of the new government three hours after the members of the new Parliament from his party unanimously approved him as their leader.

Laws Help Consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you are a struggling musician trying to pay for your leased car, or if you can't get credit simply because of your color or religion, or because you're over 65, you may find comfort in two new consumer laws. The Consumer Leasing Act, one of the two laws taking effect today, is designed to make leasing companies let customers know exactly the terms of their lease contracts before they sign on the dotted line. The second new consumer protection law extends three-year-old prohibitions against credit discrimination on the basis of sex or marital status.

Plans 'Boom Town' Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — A plan to aid America's "energy boom towns" is under consideration at the White House because President Carter fears abrupt growth is bringing a drastic decline in the quality of local housing, medical care or school facilities. Areas involved in new coal development — mainly Western states — would benefit from such a program. Coastal states, undergoing sudden oil development, already have a boom town aid program. A draft of the President's energy message being prepared for delivery to Congress reveals Carter's concern that services in boom towns "frequently become completely inadequate" to meet community needs.

Vietnam Talks Will Resume

WASHINGTON (AP) — New talks between the United States and Vietnam will focus at first on establishing an economic relationship, probably starting with an end to the American trade embargo. State Department officials say. President Carter announced Wednesday that a U.S. delegation will resume talks with Vietnamese officials in Paris in an effort to establish friendly and normal relations between the two nations. In making the announcement, Carter cited success by the commission sent to Vietnam to look into Americans still listed as missing in action. He said the talks also were being resumed at Hanoi's request. "There are no preconditions requested and there will certainly be no preconditions on our part," the President said of the new talks. But State Department experts say development of relations with Vietnam will be in careful stages similar to the process under way with China.

British Laborites Rebel

LONDON (AP) — An unprecedented alliance with the Liberal party saved Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor government from defeat on a no-confidence motion, but the Labor party's left wing rebelled today against the linkup. Some 80 left-wing Laborites signed a letter to Callaghan declaring they would not be bound by his agreement to give the middle-of-the-road Liberals a voice in shaping government policy during the four months remaining in the current session of Parliament. The deal also split Callaghan's cabinet. At least four ministers opposed it, including leftist Energy Secretary Tony Benn and Environment Secretary Peter Shore. Labor's left wing has been increasingly critical of the government's restraints on wages and its curtailment of government spending, both policies that the Liberals favor. Labor's left is also traditionally opposed to pacts with other parties.

SURVIVES CONFIDENCE VOTE: Britain's Prime Minister James Callaghan waves to a small crowd gathered outside his official residence at Number 10 Downing Street Wednesday night, shortly after the Labor government survived a no-confidence vote. The Labor government obtained a 24-vote majority, but had to seek the aid of the tiny British Liberal Party to survive the balloting, in the House of Commons. (AP Wirephoto)

Sheriff Facing Legal Test

HART, Mich. (AP) — The Oceana County sheriff faces a legal test of authority next week when the Michigan Employment Relations Commission holds hearings on charges of unfair labor practices brought against him by two former deputies. Also at issue in the hearings in Grand Rapids will be restraints of power that sheriffs across the state have in making appointments to their staffs. Similar practices are being disputed in 16 other Michigan counties, said the attorney for deputies who have brought charges against John Simmons. The Fraternal Order of Police (FOP), on behalf of two Oceana County deputies whom Simmons did not reappoint when he took office in January, is charging Simmons with discrimination in hiring in order to discourage union memberships. Simmons contends the pair was not reappointed because of incompetence, not because of political reasons.

ABC Again Is Tops In TV Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC was first in prime-time television ratings again last week, with a strong showing by three new programs, according to A.C. Nielsen figures.

The ratings made available Tuesday show that the top program for the week ending March 20 was "M.A.S.H." on CBS, and the last of 64 nationally rated programs was "The Last Voyage of the Argonaut" on "NBC Reports."

The terminal episode of "Mary Tyler Moore" boosted the show into the top 10. With a 25.5 rating, it turned up in sixth place.

On ABC, the debuts were "Eight is Enough," which posted a 21.9 rating in 16th place; "Three's Company," a 19.5, in 29th place, and "Westside Medical," an 18.5, in 32nd place. "Westside Medical" had a 34 share of the audience, four comfortable points above survival.

CBS didn't do so well, however. Its debut program, "Loves me, Loves Me Not," ended up in 48th place with a 16.3 rating. And a pilot, "African Queen," occupied 59th place with a 13.1 rating that represents 9.3 million households.

The national averages gave ABC a 20.3 rating, representing 14.5 million homes. CBS, now assured of second place for the season, had a 19.5, or 13.9 million, and NBC had 16.6, or 11.8 million.

In order, the top 10 shows were "M.A.S.H.," CBS, a 28.8 rating; "Happy Days," ABC, 28.7; "The Waltons," CBS, 27.5; "Wizard of Oz," a CBS movie special, 26.5; "One Day at a Time," CBS, 25.8; "Mary Tyler Moore," CBS, 25.5; "Murder at the World Series," ABC's Sunday movie, 24.8; "Hawaii Five-O," CBS, 24.7; "Rafferty and the Highway Hustlers," NBC's Monday movie, 24.6, and "Baretta," ABC, 24.1.

Two Chairman Are Named For BUW Divisions

Atty. Rodger Bittner and Paul Freudenberg, vice president and loan officer of Peoples Savings association, have been named chairman of the special gifts and loaned executive divisions of the 1977 Blossomland United Way campaign, according to James Murphy, general chairman.

Bittner, chairman of the special gifts division, said it was set up to accommodate Bloss-land United Way contributors who are not part of an employee giving group, and whose contributions in general exceed $100.

The division also includes accounts for some men's and women's clubs which donate funds, for agency services. Bittner said 28 clubs are reached by division volunteers, while 108 individuals are contacted. The division was first to reach its goal in the 1976 campaign.

Freudenberg, chairman of the loaned executive division, said the division will arrange with local business firms to release administrative personnel on a part-time basis during the fall drive for staff assignments on the campaign team.

Freudenberg said the program was started here in 1973 and has been a major factor in the success of recent campaigns. Approximately six loaned executives will be assigned to the soliciting divisions where they will perform a daily analysis of campaign progress.

Bittner is partner in Globensky, Gleiss, Henderson, and Bittner law firm in St. Joseph and a director and secretary of the Southern Michigan Cold Storage Company. He and his wife, Barbara, reside with their two sons, on Windsor drive, St. Joseph.

Freudenberg joined Peoples Savings association in 1965, and is a former principal of Eaman and Hull schools. He and his wife, Sally, live on Kingsley Avenue, St. Joseph. They have two sons and a daughter.

Auto Mechanics Offered LMC Refresher Course

To help mechanics in the area prepare for the Michigan auto mechanics certification exams, Lake Michigan college will offer a refresher workshop which will meet four times during April.

To be taught by Larry Shadle, St. Joseph high school auto mechanics instructor, the workshop sessions will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room B-102 in the technologies wing of the LMC main building on the Napier avenue campus, Benton township.

Workshop dates and subjects are: Monday, April 11: automatic transmissions; Thursday, April 14: manual transmissions and front and rear drive axles; Monday, April 18: electrical systems; and Monday, April 25: heating and air conditioning.

According to Sam Laswell, LMC automotive technology instructor, after Jan. 1, 1978, all motor repair facilities in Michigan will be required to have at least one certified mechanic in its employ in each category of repair which the facility provides.

"Michigan certification tests are free during 1977. After Jan. 1, 1978, each test will cost $5," Laswell said. "What better time to take these tests than now, when the state is giving them at no cost to the mechanic or his employer."

The four state tests to be administered for mechanics in the near future and their dates include: automatic transmissions, April 23; manual transmissions and front and rear drive axles, April 23; electrical systems, April 30; and heating and air conditioning, April 30. The state certification exams

Two Youths Accused Of Auto Theft

Berrien county sheriff's deputies reported two youths were arrested Wednesday night and charged with one count of auto theft after police received reports that three motor vehicles were stolen.

Deputies Don DeFord and Frank Mabrey reported Billy G. Harmon, 17, of Buchanan, and a 16-year-old Berrien Springs boy were arrested about 11:30 p.m. when a pickup truck was stopped on Ridge road, Lincoln township. The officers said the truck, owned by James K. Grooms, of Galien, had been reported stolen about 30 minutes earlier in Baroda.

Police said other vehicles reported stolen yesterday and recovered were a pickup truck, owned by Jerry Warren, of Buchanan, found in Berrien Springs; and a station wagon, owned by William Robinson, of Berrien Springs, recovered on Cleveland avenue, Baroda township. Police said the reports of stolen vehicles covered a 13-hour span Wednesday.

Harmon was booked at Berrien county jail and the 16-year-old boy was lodged at the Berrien juvenile detention center.

TEACHER LAYOFFS ALSO CONSIDERED Catholic Tuition May Increase

a prelude to a board decision on the alternatives within the next two weeks.

"The board is looking into all alternatives," Board President James O'Malley said. "No decision has been reached and will not be reached for the next couple of weeks." The next board meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, March 30.

Raymond Jordan, executive director of Lake Michigan Catholic area schools, said the school is considering the two alternatives to offset an anticipated 5 per cent increase in costs and a projected deficit of $23,000 during the current school year. The two factors will increase the current budget by $59,000, he said.

A 5 per cent increase in tuition will generate another $15,000 Jordan said, while a 10 per cent increase will add $30,000, and a 15 per cent increase, $45,000. The layoff of the equivalent of two full-time teachers will subtract $19,500 from expenditures, he said.

For a contributing member of Twin City parishes with one student in high school, an approximate 5 per cent increase would raise tuition $25, from the current $480 to $505, a 10 per cent increase would raise tuition $50, and a 15 per cent hike, $75.

Rates are based in part on number of children enrolled. The current maximum rate for members of Twin City Catholic parishes is $960. The non-member rate is $800 for one high school student and $750 or one elementary student, rising to a maximum family rate of $1,800.

While claiming a need to consider the alternatives for the next school year, Jordan said he does see "a couple of hopeful signs" in this school year's operating budget.

He said expenditures up to February of this school year are at a $5,100 deficit, compared to a $61,000 deficit for the same period last year. Assets in the Twin City Area School Fund, Inc., which provides operating support for Lake Michigan Catholic area schools, have increased from $168,452 in July to $192,000 currently, according to Jordan.

Last year, the board approved tuition increases ranging from 21 to 77 per cent for the current school year.

Although no mass objections against a tuition increase were voiced at the meeting last night, one woman said that a hike of more than 5 per cent is likely to be counter productive because a higher increase would cause a drop in enrollment.

The board members also reviewed the budget for this school year which projects expenditures of $730,000 and income of $707,000 resulting in a deficit of $23,000.

Projected expenditures include salaries for all employees, $499,800 or 68.4 per cent of the total budget; benefits for all employees, $83,300 or 11.4 per cent; instructional material and equipment, $29,000 or 3.9 per cent; plant operating and maintenance, $73,700 or 10 per cent; capital outlay, $9,000 or 1.2 per cent; insurance, $10,800 or 1.4 per cent; bus transportation, $22,500 or 3 per cent, and all other, $2,500 or 0.3 per cent.

Projected income includes tuition, $310,000 or 42.4 per cent of the total budget; parish assessments and donations, $305,000 or 41.7 per cent; proceeds from bingo, $5,000 or 0.7 per cent; student fees, $20,000 or 2.7 per cent, and all other, $17,000 or 2.3 per cent.

Two Chairman Are Named For BUW Divisions

Atty. Rodger Bittner and Paul Freudenberg, vice president and loan officer of Peoples Savings association, have been named chairmen of the special gifts and loaned executive divisions of the 1977 Blossomland United Way campaign, according to James Murphy, general chairman.

Bittner, chairman of the special gifts division, said it was set up to accommodate Blosssonland United Way contributors who are not part of an employee giving group, and whose contributions in general exceed $100.

The division also includes accounts for some men's and women's clubs which donate funds, for agency services. Bittner said 28 clubs are reached by division volunteers, while 108 individuals are contacted. The division was first to reach its goal in the 1976 campaign.

Freudenberg, chairman of the loaned executive division, said the division will arrange with local business firms to release administrative personnel on a part-time basis during the fall drive for staff assignments on the campaign team.

Freudenberg said the program was started here in 1973 and has been a major factor in the success of recent campaigns. Approximately six loaned executives will be assigned to the soliciting divisions where they will perform a daily analysis of campaign progress.

Bittner is partner in Globensky, Gleiss, Henderson, and Bittner law firm in St. Joseph and a director and secretary of the Southern Michigan Cold Storage Company. He and his wife, Barbara, reside with their two sons, on Windsor drive, St. Joseph.

Freudenberg joined Peoples Savings association in 1965, and is a former principal of Eaman and Hull schools. He and his wife, Sally, live on Kingsley Avenue, St. Joseph. They have two sons and a daughter.

TEACHER LAYOFFS ALSO CONSIDERED Catholic Tuition May Increase

An increase in tuition ranging from 5 to 15 per cent and the layoff of two full-time teachers are two alternatives Lake Michigan Catholic school officials are considering to balance the budget for the 1977-1978 school year.

Auto Mechanics Offered LMC Refresher Course

To help mechanics in the area prepare for the Michigan auto mechanics certification exams, Lake Michigan college will offer a refresher workshop which will meet four times during April.

To be taught by Larry Shadle, St. Joseph high school auto mechanics instructor, the workshop sessions will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room B-102 in the technologies wing of the LMC main building on the Napier avenue campus, Benton township.

Workshop dates and subjects are: Monday, April 11: automatic transmissions; Thursday, April 14: manual transmissions and front and rear drive axles; Monday, April 18: electrical systems; and Monday, April 25: heating and air conditioning.

According to Sam Laswell, LMC automotive technology instructor, after Jan. 1, 1978, all motor repair facilities in Michigan will be required to have at least one certified mechanic in its employ in each category of repair which the facility provides.

"Michigan certification tests are free during 1977. After Jan. 1, 1978, each test will cost $5," Laswell said. "What better time to take these tests than now, when the state is giving them at no cost to the mechanic or his employer."

The four state tests to be administered for mechanics in the near future and their dates include: automatic transmissions, April 23; manual transmissions and front and rear drive axles, April 23; electrical systems, April 30; and heating and air conditioning, April 30. The state certification exams will be given in a number of Michigan cities, including Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids.

Registration for the LMC refresher workshop will be held during the first class session, April 11. Enrollment will be limited and persons will be accepted on a first-come basis, according to Laswell. Fee for the four-session workshop is $20.

Closing date for registering for the state tests is April 1. Registration forms can be obtained by telephoning LMC's automotive technologies office at 927-3571, Ext. 290.

Trace Of PBB Found In Water

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A trace of PBB has been found in ground water under a Gratiot County landfill, but a state geologist says he needs more test results before he can say if it's a problem.

"We found some traces in ground water but that's not very significant right now," said B.P. Shah of the Department of Natural Resources. But Shah said Wednesday, "We can't rule it out" as a possible indication of significant ground water contamination.

The DNR has been testing water and soil samples at the landfill for several weeks since it was learned that 269,000 pounds of chemical wastes — 60 to 70 per cent of them PBB — were dumped at the landfill by the Michigan Chemical Co.

Tests of well water from farms near the landfill have turned up no PBB. But Shah said the chemical may move very slowly in water, and it may not have had enough time yet to reach local wells.

He said PBB amounting to a minuscule one-tenth part per billion was found in one of two ground water samples taken from wells that the DNR dug at the edge of the 46-acre landfill.

But Shah said he is awaiting results of three other ground water tests and plans to take several more Friday before deciding if the chemical has infiltrated ground water. Such a minute amount of PBB as turned up in the earlier test could be due to contamination of laboratory instruments, he said.

DNR investigators have concluded, however, that PBB-tainted runoff water from the landfill drains onto a nearby farmer's land, then into the county drain system. That eventually empties into the Pine River 6½ miles away, Shah said.

Sediment samples taken from the farmer's land showed a PBB level of 1.2 parts per million or 1,200 part per billion.

DNR officials say they have been warning the landfill since it opened in 1970 to take steps to prevent surface water from leaching chemicals from refuse dumped there. Although the landfill violates state law for that reason and others, it has not been shut down.

"We continue to hope they're going to run the place right," said DNR Director Howard Tanner. "I know that's a weak answer" to why the landfill has not been closed, he said.

Besides, according to Tanner

and other officials, many other landfills in the state also are violating various laws or rules. They complain the DNR division charged with enforcing state solid waste regulations is shortstaffed.

PBB, polychlorinated biphenyl, is the chemical which was accidentally mixed with livestock feed and distributed across Michigan, poisoning thousands of Michigan farm animals in the past three years.

Chemical Watchdog Bill Advances

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Legislation to establish a state commission with sweeping powers to protect the public from chemical contaminations won approval Wednesday in a Senate committee.

The bill, approved 4-0 by the Agriculture and Consumer Affairs Committee, is designed to give the state up-to-date information on the use of all toxic substances in Michigan and power to avert contamination similar to the PBB disaster. Sponsored by Sen. John Hertel, D-Harper Woods, the measure goes to the full Senate.

Hertel says the state has been lax in not providing safety measures against possible chemical contaminations — from DDT and mercury to PCBs and PBB.

The measure has the support of Gov. William Milliken, who proposed a similar agency in his State of the State message in January. Hertel's bill gives less power to the heads of the departments of Public Health, Agriculture and Natural Resources than Milliken's proposal. But the commission could take no emergency actions to forestall a contamination threat unless the governor agreed an emergency in fact existed.

The bill would establish a 13-member "toxic substance control commission" to inventory, test and determine the safe use of all toxic substances in Michigan, to ensure safe use and to prevent contamination from hazardous chemicals.

The commission would include the three department heads, who could not vote on declaring an emergency. It would also include representatives of universities, environmental groups and chemical companies, and a veterinarian. The commission would investigate reports of chemical problems, including illnesses in humans or animals; compile data and information on toxic substances; alert state officials to any problem; and coordinate state activities relating to such chemicals.

On a two-thirds vote, it could declare a "toxic substance emergency." If the governor agreed an emergency existed, the commission would rule on the sale, use and disposal of toxic substances, work with the federal government and conduct tests needed to determine the nature and scope of the emergency.

The bill also would require citizens and businesses to immediately report a chemical spill or contamination. Persons would risk a $1,000-a-day fine for each day it was not reported, and corporations could lose $5,000 a day.

DNR officials say they have been warning the landfill since it opened in 1970 to take steps to prevent surface water from leaching chemicals from refuse dumped there. Although the landfill violates state law for that reason and others, it has not been shut down.

"We continue to hope they're going to run the place right," said DNR Director Howard Tanner. "I know that's a weak answer" to why the landfill has not been closed, he said.

Besides, according to Tanner

and other officials, many other landfills in the state also are violating various laws or rules. They complain the DNR division charged with enforcing state solid waste regulations is shortstaffed.

Chemical Watchdog Bill Advances

By MALCOLM JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Legislation to establish a state commission with sweeping powers to protect the public from chemical contaminations won approval Wednesday in a Senate committee.

The bill, approved 4-0 by the Agriculture and Consumer Affairs Committee, is designed to give the state up-to-date information on the use of all toxic substances in Michigan and power to avert contamination similar to the PBB disaster. Sponsored by Sen. John Hertel, D-Harper Woods, the measure goes to the full Senate.

Hertel says the state has been lax in not providing safety measures against possible chemical contaminations — from DDT and mercury to PCBs and PBB.

The measure has the support of Gov. William Milliken, who proposed a similar agency in his State of the State message in January. Hertel's bill gives less power to the heads of the departments of Public Health, Agriculture and Natural Resources than Milliken's proposal. But the commission could take no emergency actions to forestall a contamination threat unless the governor agreed an emergency in fact existed.

The bill would establish a 13-member "toxic substance control commission" to inventory, test and determine the safe use of all toxic substances in Michigan, to ensure safe use and to prevent contamination from hazardous chemicals.

The commission would include the three department heads, who could not vote on declaring an emergency. It would also include representatives of universities, environmental groups and chemical companies, and a veterinarian. The commission would investigate reports of chemical problems, including illnesses in humans or animals; compile data and information on toxic substances; alert state officials to any problem; and coordinate state activities relating to such chemicals.

On a two-thirds vote, it could declare a "toxic substance emergency." If the governor agreed an emergency existed, the commission would rule on the sale, use and disposal of toxic substances, work with the federal government and conduct tests needed to determine the nature and scope of the emergency.

The bill also would require citizens and businesses to immediately report a chemical spill or contamination. Persons would risk a $1,000-a-day fine for each day it was not reported, and corporations could lose $5,000 a day.

Carter Mum On Seafarer

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The White House says President Carter will not take any immediate action on the Navy's plan to build Project Seafarer in Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

"We won't get involved in this at all until the secretary of defense has made his recommendations," said Pat Barrio of the President's staff. "At that time, the President will decide what to do."

Last Oct. 25, when Carter was campaigning for the presidency, he pledged, "If I am elected, Project Seafarer will not be built in the Upper Peninsula against the wishes of the citizens."

Ms. Barrio added Wednesday, "Secretary (of Defense Harold) Brown will consider the feelings of the people of Michigan in making his recommendations."

Five days ago, Gov. William Milliken vetoed Seafarer in its proposed U.P. location.

George Weeks, Milliken's top aide, said after hearing the White House statement, "The governor is proceeding on the assumption that Seafarer will not be built in Michigan."

"The President also said (during his campaign) that he would never lie to the people of Michigan and America. We're taking him at his word. We don't believe he will go back on his word."

Meanwhile, Wednesday, members of Michigan's top environmental review panel vowed to scrutinize a 12-volume federal environmental impact statement on Seafarer despite the governor's veto.

The Michigan Environmental Review Board was told by William Rustem, an aide to Gov. Milliken, that a close review and critique of the federal study is necessary in case President Carter decides to ignore Milliken's veto.

"The governor fully expects that Washington will uphold his right to veto the project," said Rustem. But if it doesn't, Michigan's participation in a federal environmental review "will be the only handle we'll have left" to try to stop it.

MERB members vowed to write a strong and objective response to the impact statement, particularly because the Seafarer issue could ultimately go to court.

"Some people think that since this is a political debate with no scientific input, there's no sense in going through the scientific motions," said MERB Chairman William

TELLING ABOUT ENGINES GM Launches Campaign

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has launched a nationwide campaign outlining what engines it makes and which cars it puts them in.

The nation's largest car-maker came under fire after disclosing it had been installing Chevrolet engines in Oldsmobile Delta 88s.

"Questions have been raised recently about the interchangeability of engines in GM cars," GM President E.M. Estes said Wednesday. "We want our customers to be fully informed. Display posters are being sent so that customers will have this information readily available."

Estes also said GM stresses to dealers that customers be made aware of which engine is installed in the car they buy.

Word of the campaign leaked from Pennsylvania Oldsmobile dealers a week ago, although officials at GM headquarters in Detroit and Oldsmobile division headquarters in Lansing, Mich., denied any such campaign was being considered.

Posters being distributed to dealers list eight engines manufactured by GM, ranging from the 140-cubic-inch, 4-cylinder plant to a 403-cubic-inch, 8-cylinder motor. Under each engine is listed the place it is made, specifications and model availability.

The posters list whether the engines are standard or optional, the cost over base engine price and federal Environmental Protection Agency fuel economy standards.

The controversy surfaced several weeks ago when GM officials confirmed more than 43,000 — or more than half — of the 1977-model Delta 88s were equipped with 305-cubic-inch Chevrolet engines because the firm did not have enough Olds powerplants.

From the start of 1977 Delta 88 production through January, Chevy engines were installed in 58 per cent of the Olds Delta 88s, a spokesman said at the time. He said the practice was continuing.

The powerplants are interchangeable, the company has said, although some Olds owners have complained that such items as oil filters and fan belts listed for Olds engines do not fit because they have a Chevy engine.

Estes said Wednesday that use of engines and other major components on different models within GM is not new to the firm.

"The resulting production efficiencies allow us to provide customers the best possible value for their dollars," he said.

The flap has stirred legal action in at least one state, Illinois, where a circuit court judge has ordered GM to inform all Olds owners affected by the engine switch. The company has said it is complying.

In addition, the Federal Trade Commission office in Cleveland said last week it was looking into the switching.

Estes said posters for Olds dealers have been mailed throughout the country except to California. Posters for the other GM division dealers — Chevrolet, Pontiac, Buick and Cadillac, as well as Olds in California — will be mailed shortly, he said.

A Mushrooming Friendship

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Pennsylvania Gov. Milton Shapp has belatedly settled a bet he made last year with Gov. James Rhodes on the Ohio State football game, won by the Buckeyes. But he said the Pennsylvania mushrooms he paid the bet with were only a consolation prize "since we beat you at that new game called 'Volkswagen,'" a reference to the German auto manufacturer's decision to locate a plant in Pennsylvania instead of Ohio. "In all seriousness," he wrote Rhodes, "mushroom season has arrived in the Keystone state and I am now sending you some of Pennsylvania's finest mushrooms. I hope it symbolizes the new cooperative spirit between our states so that U.S. Steel and other new plants mushroom between us to provide jobs for our citizens."

Attorney General Spells Out Driver's License Point Rules

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley ruled Tuesday points can be assessed against a person's driver's license if he hits a vehicle and fails to locate the operator or owner of the vehicle.

If the owner cannot be found, the mishap must be reported to police.

But Kelley said points may not be assessed against a driver when the accident results only in damage to fixtures near a highway, even though the driver does not try to locate the owner or person in charge of the property.

And, he said, points may not be assessed against a driver for failing to report to the police an accident that results in personal injury or property damage. The law requires a driver to report any accident involving personal injury or more than $200 in property damage, but the penalty for violation does not include points.

"In the area of accidents, state law says that points shall be assessed when a driver fails to stop and disclose his identity at the scene of an accident when the law requires him to do so," Kelley said. "Only a driver who hits another vehicle is required to do this, so that is the only time points may be assessed."

Kelley said his rulings should clarify the points procedure for the secretary of state's office. They were issued at the request of Bay County Prosecutor Eugene Penzien.

Reading Bill Passes Senate

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Intermediate school districts in Michigan would qualify for funds to pay teachers of special reading programs under a bill which won approval in the Senate on Tuesday. The bill, passed 28-0 and sent to the House, would provide 75 per cent of remedial reading teachers' salaries, up to $8,100. Local school districts have been able to obtain the same amount of pay under the school aid act, but intermediate systems were omitted.

FIRM PULLING OUT OF MICHIGAN PBB-Maker Haunted By Bad Publicity

By SUSAN AGER
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Firemaster BP-6 was just one of a half dozen or so fire retardants manufactured by the Michigan Chemical Co. It was a good product and sales grew steadily after it went on the market in 1971.

But the main ingredient in Firemaster, a chemical called polybrominated biphenyl or PBB, has become the biggest headache the small firm ever had in its 42 years in Michigan. Bad publicity about the company's role in Michigan's massive PBB livestock poisoning was one factor that persuaded the firm to put its St. Louis plant up for sale and move to Arkansas.

And you can't find Michigan Chemical in the stock listings any longer. It merged Jan. 1 with Velsicol Chemical Corp. of Chicago and assumed that new name.

As soon as the St. Louis plant is sold, the company will be virtually gone from the state.

All that will remain is a small Ann Arbor research lab — the scars of what many have called the worst livestock poisoning episode in the nation's history.

"It's a regrettable incident, isn't it?" said former president Paul Hoffman, now Velsicol's board chairman. "It hasn't been good for the state of Michigan, it hasn't been good for the Farm Bureau and it hasn't been good for us."

Officials at Velsicol and its giant conglomerate parent, Northwest Industries, of Chicago, won't say exactly how much money Michigan Chemical has lost battling the complicated four-year-old PBB problem.

Besides attorneys fees for a tangle of legal cases, money also went for research on PBB's effects, including the leasing of a dairy farm near Lansing where PBB-tainted cows are studied. The company shares that expense with the Michigan Farm Bureau.

Insurance companies for Michigan Chemical and the Michigan Farm Bureau Services, which accidentally mixed Firemaster BP-6 with livestock feed in 1973, already have paid claims totaling $37.9 million to about 615 farmers. Another 100 farmers still have not settled and a reported 62 court suits are pending.

Michigan Chemical was never a booming business. "Dow Chemical and Michigan Chemical would be like the whale and the minnow," Hoffman said from Chicago in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Its 1971 profit was a meager $1.14 million, with $15 million in sales. Its plant employs about 300 people.

Company officials deny that PBB publicity or the problem's high costs have significant hurt the company financially.

Besides fire retardants, Michigan Chemical made and continues to make various other salt-based chemicals at its St. Louis plant. One of them was a magnesium oxide animal feed supplement called Nutrimaster. Firemaster and Nutrimaster were shipped in identical bags with similar labels, but Nutrimaster should have been mixed with the feed.

Michigan Chemical began producing PBB in 1971 for use in one variety of Firemaster that was sold mainly to plastics in testimony at the state's first PBB contamination trial, show 9,100-112,000 pounds of PBB manufactured still are unaccounted for.

Michigan Chemical, along with Michigan Farm Bureau

the cattle.

Michigan Chemical also has had repeated run-ins with state officials over its pollution of the Pine River with PBB and other chemicals.

Rather than spend several million dollars to treat the polluted waters, the company agreed last September to pay a $20,000 fine, eliminate PBB and other chemical residues running into the river, then move out of the state by September, 1978, Hoffman said.

This year, Michigan Chemical drew more bad publicity after 200,000 pounds of chemical wastes — mainly PBB — were found to have been illegally dumped in a Gratiot County landfill near the St. Louis plant.

But, says Hoffman, "Despite the problem of PBB, on balance we're contributing substantially to the public's well-being."

He blames the press for unfair and biased coverage not only of the PBB problem, but the chemical industry, too.

"Generally when we read about chemical companies in the papers it's about their problems and rarely about their contributions," he says.

Velsicol will continue manufacturing chemicals in St. Louis until the plant is sold.

Already much of its bromine chemical production — which once included PBB — is done in Arkansas. Eventually, all Velsicol's products will be made there.

Press Rapped For Ignoring Chemical Firms' Contributions

manufacturers.

It was considered an excellent fire retardant — almost impervious to flame — and nearly 5,000 tons of PBB were manufactured between 1971 and November 1974, when production of the chemical was halted.

No one is sure how much PBB was mixed with livestock feed. But company records, included

Services and three other firms, is a defendant in a $250,000 damage suit filed in Westford County Circuit Court by a Falmouth farmer, Roy Tacoma. Tacoma claims feed tainted with PBB cost him 100 cows.

Michigan Chemical has admitted Tacoma received PBB contaminated feed but contest is assertion that it was harmful to

By SUSAN AGER
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Firemaster BP-6 was just one of a half dozen or so fire retardants manufactured by the Michigan Chemical Co. It was a good product and sales grew steadily after it went on the market in 1971.

But the main ingredient in Firemaster, a chemical called polybrominated biphenyl or PBB, has become the biggest headache the small firm ever had in its 42 years in Michigan.

Bad publicity about the company's role in Michigan's massive PBB livestock poisoning was one factor that persuaded the firm to put its St. Louis plant up for sale and move to Arkansas.

And you can't find Michigan Chemical in the stock listings any longer. It merged Jan. 1 with Velsicol Chemical Corp. of Chicago and assumed that new name.

As soon as the St. Louis plant is sold, the company will be virtually gone from the state.

All that will remain is a small Ann Arbor research lab — the scars of what many have called the worst livestock poisoning episode in the nation's history.

"It's a regrettable incident, isn't it?" said former president Paul Hoffman, now Velsicol's board chairman. "It hasn't been good for the state of Michigan, it hasn't been good for the Farm Bureau and it hasn't been good for us."

Officials at Velsicol and its giant conglomerate parent, Northwest Industries of Chicago, won't say exactly how much money Michigan Chemical has lost battling the complicated four-year-old PBB problem.

Besides attorneys fees for a tangle of legal cases, money also went for research on PBB's effects, including the leasing of a dairy farm near Lansing where PBB-tainted cows were studied. The company shares that expense with the Michigan Farm Bureau.

Insurance companies for Michigan Chemical and the Michigan Farm Bureau Services, which accidentally mixed Firemaster BP-6 with livestock feed in 1973, already have paid claims totalling $37.9 million to about 615 farmers. Another 100 farmers still have not settled and a reported 62 court suits are pending.

Michigan Chemical was never a booming business. "Dow Chemical and Michigan Chemical would be like the whale and the minnow," Hoffman said from Chicago in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Its 1971 profit was a meager $1.14 million, with $15 million in sales. Its plant employs about 300 people.

Company officials deny that PBB publicity or the problem's high costs have significantly hurt the company financially.

Besides fire retardants, Michigan Chemical made and continues to make various other salt-based chemicals at its St. Louis plant. One of them was a magnesium oxide animal feed supplement called Nutrimaster. Firemaster and Nutrimaster were shipped in identical bags

BALTIMORE (AP) — No further action will be taken on allegations that former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew violated his probation, a federal judge has ruled.

with similar labels, but Nutrimaster should have been mixed with the feed.

Michigan Chemical began producing PBB in 1971 for use in one variety of Firemaster that was sold mainly to plastics

the cattle.

Michigan Chemical also has had repeated run-ins with state officials over its pollution of the Pine River with PBB and other chemicals.

Rather than spend several million dollars to treat the polluted waters, the company agreed last September to pay a $20,000 fine, eliminate PBB and other chemical residues running into the river, then move out of the state by September, 1978, Hoffman said.

This year, Michigan Chemical drew more bad publicity after 269,000 pounds of chemical wastes — mainly PBB — were found to have been illegally dumped in a Gratiot County landfill near the St. Louis plant.

But, says Hoffman, "Despite the problem of PBB, on balance we're contributing substantially to the public's well-being."

He blames the press for unfair and biased coverage not only of the PBB problem, but the chemical industry, too.

"Generally when we read about chemical companies in the papers it's about their problems and rarely about their contributions," he says.

Velsicol will continue manufacturing chemicals in St. Louis until the plant is sold.

Already much of its bromine chemical production — which once included PBB — is done in Arkansas. Eventually, all Velsicol's products will be made there.

Attorney General Spells Out Driver's License Point Rules

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley ruled Tuesday points can be assessed against a person's driver's license if he hits a vehicle and fails to locate the operator or owner of the vehicle.

If the owner cannot be found, the mishap must be reported to police.

But Kelley said points may not be assessed against a driver when the accident results only in damage to fixtures near a highway, even though the driver does not try to locate the owner or person in charge of the property.

And, he said, points may not be assessed against a driver for failing to report to the police an accident that results in personal injury or property damage. The law requires a driver to report any accident involving personal injury or more than $200 in property damage, but the penalty for violation does not include points.

"In the area of accidents, state law says that points shall be assessed when a driver fails to stop and disclose his identity at the scene of an accident when the law requires him to do so," Kelley said. "Only a driver who hits another vehicle is required to do this, so that is the only time points may be assessed."

Kelley said his rulings should clarify the points procedure for the secretary of state's office. They were issued at the request of Bay County Prosecutor Eugene Penzien.

Reading Bill Passes Senate

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Intermediate school districts in Michigan would qualify for funds to pay teachers of special reading programs under a bill which won approval in the Senate on Tuesday. The bill, passed 28-0 and sent to the House, would provide 75 per cent of remedial reading teachers' salaries, up to $8,100. Local school districts have been able to obtain the same amount of pay under the school aid act, but intermediate systems were omitted.

Joan Mondale Is Right At Home

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — One benefit of living in the stately quarters of the vice president, says Joan Mondale, "is that our children's table manners have vastly improved."

Another, she said, is that the house, situated high on Observatory Hill, "reminds me of every house we lived in in Minnesota. The wind has that same, high-pitched whine. Last night it blew out a window."

Mrs. Mondale's comments were made Wednesday afternoon at a buffet lunch for members of the press. They had been invited to view the American art collection she has assembled from numerous museums around the country, primarily from the Midwest.

The art is on loan to her for a year.

But art was a minor topic.

JOAN MONDALE
Life and 'Magic'

The question was about life in the Admiral's House, the vice presidential mansion, and about being a part of the vice president's family.

She said the Mondale family, which includes Teddy, 19, Eleanor, 17, and William, 15, usually gathers at home for dinner. "But if I don't have breakfast with my husband, he goes off with the front page of the paper, and I can't stand it."

Teddy has a job selling motorcycles in suburban Maryland "but he wants to go to college," she said. Eleanor is a junior at the private Georgetown Day School, and William attends the exclusive St. Albans School for Boys.

Mrs. Mondale takes weekly art classes in pottery. "You know you've made it as a potter when your pots are good enough to give away. I gave one to Rosalynn (Carter) in Plains on July 8, and I miss it. Rosalynn has it on her mantelpiece there."

Was that how the Mondales got the vice presidency? someone joked.

"It was the magic in the pot," Mrs. Mondale said with a laugh. "The pot got us the nomination."

She and the vice president have dined twice at the White House, she said, once in the family's private quarters and once at a dinner for the Supreme Court.

"And Amy didn't come and read a book," she said, alluding to the publicity the Carter's 9-year-old daughter has received for reading books at state dinners.

"Amy is an incredible child," Mrs. Mondale continued. "She's so bright. She took a basket of toys to the opera when the Carters went to see 'Madame Butterfly.' Afterwards she said she took them in case she got bored, but she she gave a stiff little talk about the history of the 86-year-old house.

But later, over spinach souffle, she relaxed as she

They include contemporary pieces, like Andy Warhol's Campbell Soup can, a lithograph by Roy Lichtenstein and a collage by Robert Motherwell.

"I ask the children to learn the names of the artists and the names of the paintings," she said. "That way when they take a class trip and see a David Smith sculpture, they can say, 'Oh, a David Smith. I know his work.'"

Her husband can't decide which art work he likes best. Mrs. Mondale said, but "he'll soon learn to relax and enjoy the shapes and colors and forms and not worry about storytelling. That's okay. I think a lot of people start that way."

At 46, Joan Mondale strikes strangers as a warm, friendly woman, quick to laugh and eager to put guests at ease. Standing on the stairway landing, just above an armful-size arrangement of fresh forsythia, magnolia and cherry blossoms, related personal anecdotes, punctuating many sentences with exclamations of "fantastic" and "isn't that neat?"

Mrs. Mondale has collected 52 pieces of art by 20th century American artists to decorate the house, a Victorian mansion overlooking Embassy Row.

'Missing' Tires Being Replaced

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The fifth wheels are rolling again for buyers of 2.6 million new cars who were driving without spares because of last year's United Rubber Workers strike. But not all the drivers are happy.

Most of the missing spare tires are believed to have been shipped to dealers. Federal Trade Commission lawyer Alan Rubin says, but "that does not mean, of course, that they've all gotten to the customer."

"They could be on a boarding dock somewhere, tied up waiting for a truck. There could be a middleman problem," Rubin said.

General Motors, Ford and Chrysler last summer ordered that some of their new cars be delivered without spares in order to stretch tire supplies during the four-month strike, which ended last September.

GM and Ford said 99 per cent of deliveries to dealers have been completed. Chrysler said it expects to have all scheduled deliveries on the way to dealers by Friday.

But some customers still are waiting for their promised tires, and complaints keep trickling in to the FTC. Some auto dealers also say they haven't received enough tires for all their customers.

In Los Angeles, the service manager of Coberly Ford said the dealership received only about 75 per cent of the tires it was supposed to get.

Other drivers, like Benjamin Budowsky of North Miami Beach, Fla., received the spare but still are steaming. Budowsky bought his 1977 Chevrolet Impala last June 29 and didn't get his spare tire until January.

"I wrote letters to everybody. They kept telling me they would take care of it soon," said Budowsky.

Budowsky says he is mad not only about the delay but at the dealer for not telling him the car was delivered without a tire and at GM, whom he accused of making money by charging for a tire months ahead of delivery.

The complaint that the Big Three auto makers made money on charging in advance for tires not delivered for months is a familiar one to the FTC, which is conducting a preliminary investigation of the spare tire episode. "There is no question that, in effect, they are saying it was an interest-free loan. But the auto companies respond that the expense of getting tires distributed is far more costly than the money they got," says the FTC's Rubin.

The FTC also is looking into complaints that some spare tires delivered to car buyers don't match those on the car and is trying to determine whether the auto manufacturers or the tire manufacturers are to blame for lengthy delays in delivery.

The FTC won't decide whether to take any action until after the staff report is completed several weeks from now, Rubin said.

Pickle Packer's Product Perfect

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
FARMINGDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Nat Stern picks his pickles in charred oak barrels previously used for aging whiskey. Could that be the secret?

Nat Stern also has an abiding dislike of machinery. Could that be it?

Whatever it is, it has kept

Stern's pickle works in business at the same old stand since 1894, a boon not only to the Stern family but also to four generations of Long Island gastronomes. Long Island is the only place on earth you can find a Stern pickle and surely worth the trip. Nat Stern does not export. That may be part of his secret too.

"We make pickles exactly the way they were made when this place opened," Nat Stern said. "The formula is the same for the brine. The spices are the same. The amount of dill weed is the same. Nothing has changed. We have never used chemicals and never will. We do try to improve the quality of our cucumbers — we even provide the seed to our growers. But the pickling process is the same."

"As for the barrels, the fact that they once held whiskey has nothing to do with the taste of the pickle, at least I don't think it has.

"It's just that cooperage is practically a lost art nowadays. Distilleries are the best source of charred oak barrels because they can use them only once. The wood is what matters. You can't make a real pickle in anything except wood."

Nat Stern should know. He is 74, the son of the founder, and has spent many a pungent day at the pickle works.

In fact, at one point in a restless boyhood he had it up to here with pickles. At age 15 he hopped a passing boat and spent five years on the, pardon, bring deep, tramping the world from port to port, growing up.

Nat's father, Aaron Stern, came to America from Austria with not much more than a pushcart and a dream. Up and down Delancey St. on Manhattan's Lower East Side he peddled pickles.

"They weren't his own pickles, though," his son explained, "so he had no advantage over any other peddler with the same pickles. He figured that if he made his own pickles their quality would be the selling point and he could avoid the price-juggling rat race. That belief hasn't changed either."

So Aaron Stern moved to Long Island, out in the country where the cucumbers grew.

Most of that vast farmland has long since been paved over; Nat's cucumber suppliers follow the harvest from Mexico to Michigan. The pickle works, though, remains as Aaron Stern built it.

It is a long, low building with an ancient floor worn to a

BH School 'Marathon' Draws 200

More than 200 people attended the annual marathon meeting recently held by the Benton Harbor area schools' compensatory education staff, according to Gladys Burks, compensatory education coordinator.

Mrs. Burks said parents, Benton Harbor school employees and a "significant number" of school representatives from area school districts attended the meeting which offered an explanation of compensatory programs available in Benton Harbor Area schools.

Compensatory programs are designed to provide extra support for students disadvantaged because of income or social problems.

Mrs. Burks said this year's budget of about $2 million supports eight programs including pre-school, teacher training, community relations, Project HELP (Home Education Learning Program), health education, Indian education, school age mothers, and Chapter III remedial reading assistance.

Death Row Donor

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Death row convict James Whitmore Jr. would like to donate his body "to help the living" if he is electrocuted for his part in a woman's murder.

But the wish of the 36-year-old prisoner that his body's organs be transplanted to others after his death may not be fulfilled because of a state law which requires the immediate embalming of an executed convict.

Lawyers for John Sealy Hospital say the institution cannot legally accept the offer.

Whitmore's attorney, Brantley Pringle, said Whitmore "emphasized he didn't want to die, but said he felt the time would come eventually when they would strap him in the chair and send the current through his body."

"He said as a man who has accepted Christ, he wanted to arrange for his organs to help others after his death."

The attorney urged the legislature to change the law to allow hospitals to "accept the generosity" of men like Whitmore, whose "strong religious conviction appeared shortly after the death penalty was assessed."

FORMULA UNCHANGED SINCE 1894

Pickle Packer's Product Perfect

By JULES LOH

AP Special Correspondent

FARMINGDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Nat Stern picks his pickles in charred oak barrels previously used for aging whiskey. Could that be the secret?

Nat Stern also has an abiding dislike of machinery. Could that be it?

Whatever it is, it has kept

Stern's pickle works in business at the same old stand since 1894, a boon not only to the Stern family but also to four generations of Long Island gastronomes. Long Island is the only place on earth you can find a Stern pickle and surely worth the trip. Nat Stern does not export. That may be part of his secret too.

"We make pickles exactly the way they were made when this place opened," Nat Stern said.

"The formula is the same for the brine. The spices are the same. The amount of dill weed is the same. Nothing has changed. We have never used chemicals and never will. We do try to improve the quality of our cucumbers — we even provide the seed to our growers. But the pickling process is the same.

"As for the barrels, the fact that they once held whiskey has nothing to do with the taste of the pickle, at least I don't think it has.

"It's just that cooperage is practically a lost art nowadays. Distilleries are the best source of charred oak barrels because they can use them only once. The wood is what matters. You can't make a real pickle in anything except wood."

Nat Stern should know. He is 74, the son of the founder, and has spent many a pungent day at the pickle works.

In fact, at one point in a restless boyhood he had it up to here with pickles. At age 15 he hopped a passing boat and spent five years on the, pardon, briny deep, traipsing the world from port to port, growing up.

Nat's father, Aaron Stern, came to America from Austria with not much more than a pushcart and a dream. Up and down Delaney St. on Manhattan's Lower East Side he peddled pickles.

"They weren't his own pickles, though," his son explained, "so he had no advantage over any other peddler with the same pickles. He figured that if he made his own pickles their quality would be the selling point and he could avoid the price-juggling rat race. That belief hasn't changed either."

So Aaron Stern moved to Long Island, out in the country where the cucumbers grew.

Most of that vast farmland has long since been paved over; Nat's cucumber suppliers follow the harvest from Mexico to Michigan. The pickle works, though, remains as Aaron Stern built it.

It is a long, low building with an ancient floor worn to a

High Court Orders New Trial For Iowa Slayer

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, with four of its nine members disagreeing in harshly worded dissents, Wednesday ordered a new trial for a convicted Iowa murderer who led police to the mutilated body of his young victim.

NEW TRIAL: The U.S. Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision Wednesday, ordered a new trial for Anthony Erthel Williams, convicted of the Christmas Eve, 1968, abduction and murder of a 10-year-old Urbandale girl. Attorneys for Williams, also known as Robert Anthony Williams, argued that Williams had been illegally questioned at the time of his arrest and had not been advised of his rights. (AP Laserphoto)

Senate Makeup Unchanged

By ASSOCIATED PRESS
* Two state representatives, one a Democrat and the other a Republican, were elected to the state Senate Wednesday in special elections. State Rep. Harold Scott, D-Flint was elected to the 29th Senate district seat while state Rep. Robert Geake, R-Northville, won the 14th district Senate post. The special elections failed to change the makeup of the state Senate, leaving Democrats in control with a 23-14 edge. Scott, 39, a former teacher in his third term in the House, outpolled Grand Blanc Township supervisor William Delaney, 38, by a final vote of 9,262 to 6,006. In the western Wayne County election, Geake polled 15,071 votes to 7,716 for Patrick McDonald, Democratic supervisor of Redford Township. Only 17 per cent of the districts voters turned out.

'Millionaire Parties' Get Nod

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state Senate has approved a bill extending the authority of non-profit organizations to hold "millionaire parties" to raise funds. Under the measure, passed 26-1 and sent to the House, groups could hold four-day parties to raise money. Previously, they could obtain licenses from the lottery bureau for just one day. Millionaire parties involve the use of fake money and casino games, with participants donating money to the sponsoring organization to vie for the top prize.

Cease And Desist Order

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The state issued a cease and desist order against a Troy firm Wednesday, charging it with engaging in false, misleading or deceptive advertising. Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley said Town and Country Decorating Centers, Inc., ran ads which failed to reveal regular prices and engaged in other deceptive acts.

He'll Head State Hospital

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Walter Kenzie of Saline has been named director of Ypsilanti State Hospital, it was announced. Kenzie has been acting director of the hospital since October. He previously was business executive for the facility, the largest psychiatric treatment center in the state. Meanwhile, Charles Pearson of East Lansing was named director of the mental health department's new Riverside Treatment Center in Eaton County. The center is located between Lansing and Eaton Rapids, and serves Clinton, Eaton, Gratiot, Ingham, Ionia and Montcalm counties. Pearson has been acting director since September.

Troopers Oppose Ban

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan State Police have come out in opposition to banning double-tanker fuel trucks from Michigan freeways, saying the cure would be worse than the disease. Capt. William Rucinski of the state police fire marshal division said a ban would only force the tandem rigs onto secondary roads, where they would be even more dangerous. Capt. Rucinski made his comments to a legislative committee. Police opposition is likely to doom an outright freeway ban on the rigs and spark efforts to review the whole question of truck safety. A special legislative committee to review the question has been proposed. On the request of Rep. Dennis Hertel, D-Detroit, sponsor of a bill to ban the tandem tankers from freeways, the House Roads and Bridges Committee agreed to sit on the bill until the special panel makes a report.

Woman's Body Found

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP) — The St. Clair County coronor's office scheduled an autopsy today to determine the cause of death of a young woman found in a snow-covered ditch. Police say the woman has tentatively been identified as 20-year-old Iris Johnston, who was last seen Jan. 19 leaving a Port Huron bar with an unidentified man. Her body was found Wednesday in a wooded area near the village of Goodells, about 12 miles west of Port Huron. Deputies said the body was discovered by a resident walking through the woods. A search for Mrs. Johnston of Port Huron, had been concentrated in the Goodells area since some of her clothing and other effects were found in that region.

prosecutors have used it to attack the so-called Miranda ruling restricting police questioning of criminal suspects. But the court's 5-4 decision re-emphasized the fact that law enforcement officers are required to advise criminal suspects of their right to remain silent and to have a lawyer during questioning.

The court voted to overthrow the conviction of Robert Anthony Williams, ruling that police illegally questioned Williams when he did not have the assistance of an attorney.

Williams' case now will return to the Iowa courts for a new murder trial.

Civil rights attorneys throughout the country had feared that the high court, distinctly conservative in matters of criminal law under Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, would use the Williams' case to overturn the Miranda decision, one of the most controversial rulings the court has ever handed down.

In 1966, a more liberal court under the late Chief Justice Earl Warren ruled in the Miranda case that a criminal suspect in custody must be told that he has the right not to talk to police. The suspect also must be advised of his rights to counsel, and if he chooses, police may not question him.

If they do, the Warren court said, any statements he makes may not be used as evidence against him.

The court's main opinion

today did not go into great detail about the merits of the Miranda decision, but stated emphatically that Williams' rights to be represented by an attorney had been violated in a conversation he had with a police detective during a car ride from Davenport, Iowa, to Des Moines.

The detective told Williams that he should disclose the location of 10-year-old Pamela Powers of Des Moines so the girl could receive a "Christian burial."

The appeal to Williams' religious fervor succeeded, and he led police to the dead girl's body.

Justice Potter Stewart wrote the court's main opinion and was joined by Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Thurgood Marshall, Lewis F. Powell Jr. and John Paul Stevens. Chief Justice Burger and Justices Byron R. White, Harry A. Blackmun and William H. Rehnquist dissented.

In an unusual move, Burger read part of his dissent from the bench. "The result reached by the court in this case ought to be intolerable in any society which purports to call itself an organized society," he said.

"It continues the court, by the narrowest margin, on the much criticized course of punishing the public for the mistakes and misdeeds of law enforcement officers," Burger said.

Stewart's opinion said Williams' rights under two constitutional amendments had been violated.

Water Project Battle Brewing

By TOM BAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Carter's objections to 30 federal water projects, Congress seems determined to have the final say on the disputed dam, reservoir, irrigation and flood control proposals.

Congressional sources predicted most, if not all, of the projects will wind their way back into the federal budget, one way or the other.

Rep. Robert N. Glavin, D-Conn., chairman of the House Budget Committee, says he is recommending full funding for all water projects previously authorized by Congress — including all 30 on Carter's new review list.

His committee begins work today on its fiscal 1978 budget resolution. Glavin said he included all water projects in the draft the committee will work with "on the theory that Congress feels strongly about them."

Carter on Tuesday issued the latest version of his "endangered list." He said he will recommend they be halted if they don't meet economic, safety and environmental tests.

Sixteen of the 30 were among the 19 projects cut last month from Carter's fiscal 1978 budget recommendation to Congress. The other 14 will remain in the

'Gay' Gets High New York Post

By MARC ROSENWASSER

NEW YORK (AP) — Gay rights activist Robert Livingston says his appointment to New York City's Commission on Human Rights reflects the national political climate homosexuals have.

The best example of that progress, he says, is a White House meeting scheduled for Saturday between presidential adviser Midge-son-Tanza and 11 gay rights activists. The meeting, organized by the National Gay Task Force, is the second of its kind in the last seven weeks.

Livingston takes over his post on the 15-member panel today.

"I think that my appointment is not an isolated act," Livingston said during a telephone interview Wednesday. "I think that there is movement in the right direction across the country."

He added: "I think it is timely recognition of the fact that homosexuals have votes and are a substantial minority in the city."

A spokesman for Mayor Abraham D. Beame denied that Livingston's appointment was politically motivated. Beame, a Democrat, is expected to seek a second term, and some gay activists regarded the appointment as an attempt to dampen the rights issue before this year's campaign.

The 45-year-old, avowed homosexual, the son of fashion designer McElreath Paris, was a theatrical producer in London and once produced the Joey Bishop Show on ABC-TV. He also published MORE, a journal on review.

Livingston said he didn't intend to hear only cases involving homosexuals. But he said would fight for a bill to protect the civil rights of homosexuals in New York City, where there are an estimated 300,000-500,000 gay men and women.

There are such statutes in 39 municipalities, Livingston said, including San Francisco, Washington, Minneapolis and Charlotte, N.C. An ordinance banning discrimination in housing and employment is now under fire in Miami.

A 60-year-old black Roman Catholic, single woman from Jamaica cannot be turned down for an apartment on the basis of who she is. If she were, she could go before the commission and the commission has the legal power to correct the situation," Livingston said.

"If, on the other hand, she said she was going to live there with her 45-year-old female lover, she would have no recourse."

New Mexicans Opposed To Seafarer, Too

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — If the Navy decides it wants to build Seafarer, a giant underground antenna, on White Sands Missile Range it will be in the face of strong local opposition to the project.

Local officials and area residents appearing at a public meeting this week expressed strong opposition to any plans to locate Project Seafarer at White Sands.

The Navy says White Sands Missile Range is a distant third in consideration for the communications grid, which would be used to beam signals to submerged submarines in oceans around the world. The Navy's first choice is a location in Michigan's Upper Peninsula, and the second preferred location is in Nevada.

When he deleted the original 19 projects from his budget proposal in February, Carter aroused the ire of scores of congressmen, including some prominent members of his own party.

Water Project Battle Brewing

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Carter's objections to 30 federal water projects, Congress seems determined to have the final say on the disputed dam, reservoir, irrigation and flood control proposals.

Congressional sources predicted most, if not all, of the projects will wend their way back into the federal budget, one way or the other.

Rep. Robert N. Giaino, D-Conn., chairman of the House Budget Committee, says he is recommending full funding for all water projects previously authorized by Congress — including all 30 on Carter's new review list.

His committee begins work today on its fiscal 1978 budget resolution. Giaino said he included all water projects in the draft the committee will work with "on the theory that Congress feels strongly about them."

Carter on Tuesday issued the latest version of his "endangered list." He said he will recommend they be halted if they don't meet economic, safety and environmental tests.

Sixteen of the 30 were among the 19 projects cut last month from Carter's fiscal 1978 budget recommendation to Congress. The other 14 will remain in the

Quick Action Predicted On Carter's Drought Relief

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Quick action on President Carter's drought relief program is being predicted in Congress, despite grumbling about his plan to charge farmers 5 per cent interest on loans to buy water. "Obviously the President shares my own sense of urgency regarding the severe drought," Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., chairman of the House Interior Committee, said after the program was unveiled Wednesday. "I am in substantial agreement with the proposals outlined in his message to the Congress and am confident the committee will act expeditiously on this urgent matter." Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Committee on Energy and Nattural Resources, also said he was pleased with parts of Carter's message, but added there were "some problems ... which will have to be reviewed very carefully."

He said that "in light of the emergency," the farmers should receive grants, not loans at 5 per cent interest.

At a House hearing on drought relief, Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus said Congress has provided for 5 per cent loans to farmers in other types of disaster relief programs and the Carter proposal was in line with this policy.

Rep. Lloyd Meeds, D-Wash., chairman of the House Interior subcommittee on water and power, said this seemed "un- toward."

He added, "I suggest you rethink the entire approach of 5 per cent interest on disaster."

Carter asked Congress to approve a program of loans and grants totaling $84 million for farmers, businessmen and communities in the drought-stricken West and Midwest.

"If we are to be of real help to the people afflicted, time is of the essence," the President said.

Carter also said he had asked the Interior and Agriculture Departments to make additional federal land available for grazing.

Some congressional sources predicted this would arouse opposition from environmentalists who have argued that public lands are grazed beyond their capacity already.

The 5 per cent interest would apply to several types of loans under the program, including up to $100 million that the Interior Department would be authorized to loan for the purchase of water through a so-called "water bank." The Senate has already passed a bill along this line, but its version calls for $200 million and would provide the money in the form of grants.

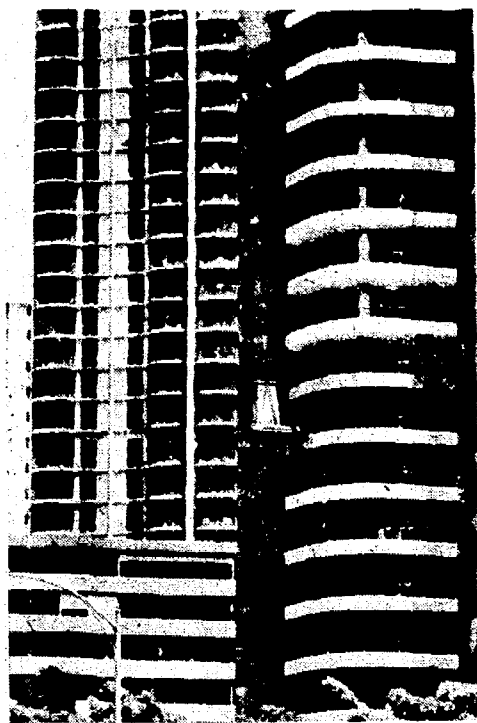

The Carter package also contains:

—Temporary authority to allow the Economic Development Administration and the Farmers Home Administration to grant $150 million and loan $200 million to communities for emergency improvements to their water systems.

—A Small Business Administration program providing $50 million in low interest loans to small businesses in drought areas.

—A program that could provide $100 million in 5 per cent loans to farmers and ranchers in the drought areas to cover prospective losses.

Two Bodies Turn Up In Ashes

CHICAGO (AP) — Federal and local authorities were investigating today an extraordinary fire where two bodies turned up, one with his hands bound and the other with a gunshot wound in the jaw.

Hours after the spectacular South Side blaze, firemen and police found in the debris of a burned-out food and liquor store the body of Robert Fender Sr., a 52-year-old auctioneer whose hands were bound together with twine.

A second body, identified as Richard Patzke, a loan specialist with the Small Business Administration, was uncovered early today in the rubble of a nearby bowling alley. He had been shot once in the jaw.

Authorities said the fire, which burned through four businesses Wednesday, may have been started to cover up the bodies of Fender and Patzke.

'Acre Feet' Short In San Francisco

By BILL MARTIN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Franciscans are short on acre feet, that measurement of water one foot deep and an acre in area — more precisely 326,000 gallons.

The reservoirs that supply the city are about 86,000 acre feet below their normal level of 200,000, which converts to about 65 billion gallons of water.

Utility officials say that if city residents follow the new water conservation guidelines and cut their water use by 25 per cent, they'll save 200 acre feet a day.

Just what can you do with an acre foot?

Those 326,000 gallons will sustain a family of five for a year. Within them are 1.3 million quarts, 2.6 million pints, 5.2 million cups, 83.5 million tablespoons and 250.4 million teaspoons.

If you were to drink an eight-ounce glass of water every 15 minutes, it would take you slightly more than 61 years to drink the lake dry.

Put another way, an acre foot is enough for 13,400 showers. It could also wash some 652,000 pairs of hands and provide 9,000 luxurious baths in wetter times.

By following the water conservation regulations, you could use an acre foot to shave 326,300 times, brush your teeth 652,000 times, wash 65,200 batches of dishes, do 12,000 loads of laundry and flush the toilet 81,000 times.

It's enough to mix 5.2 million servings of oatmeal or 2.25 million pre-packaged cake mixes.

An equal amount of whipped cream would bury four million pieces of strawberry shortcake. It could be frozen into a threefoot wide, one-inch thick strip for use in a 37-mile sled ride.

Perhaps most importantly, you can take the ice cubes you froze out of the acre foot and pour yourself about 14 million stiff drinks.

Wiretap Opponents Back Amendment

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Opponents of narcotics wiretap legislation hope to protect telephone employees from being forced to hook up wiretaps in police drug investigations.

Communications workers would not have to make the hookups over their objections under an amendment pending on a bill that would give limited wiretap powers to police in major narcotics cases.

The bill is part of a six-bill package aimed at cracking down on major dealers in heroin-based narcotics and cocaine. Debate on the bills continued for nearly three hours Wednesday in the state House, but no action was taken.

In addition to allowing court-approved 30-day wiretaps, the bills set mandatory prison terms of up to life without parole for dealers caught with more than 1½ pounds of certain narcotics.

About 25 amendments intended to soften the bills have been soundly defeated, but there is broader support for the effort to protect telephone workers from even indirect involvement in drug probes.

Offered by Rep. Lynn Jundahl, D-East Lansing, the amendment won votes of a majority of those on the floor, but not enough to attach it to the bill. The House voted to reconsider and the amendment will be taken up again Thursday.

The sponsor of the bills, Rep. Paul Rosenbaum, D-Battle Creek, says he wants to avoid forcing police to create costly squads of communications experts for tasks that might rarely be needed.

Wiretap Opponents Back Amendment

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Opponents of narcotics wiretap legislation hope to protect telephone employees from being forced to hook up wiretaps in police drug investigations.

Communications workers would not have to make the hookups over their objections under an amendment pending on a bill that would give limited wiretap powers to police in major narcotics cases.

The bill is part of a six-bill package aimed at cracking down on major dealers in heroin-based narcotics and cocaine. Debate on the bills continued for nearly three hours Wednesday in the state House, but no action was taken.

In addition to allowing court-approved 30-day wiretaps, the bills set mandatory prison terms of up to life without parole for dealers caught with more than 1½ pounds of certain narcotics.

About 25 amendments intended to soften the bills have been soundly defeated, but there is broader support for the effort to protect telephone workers from even indirect involvement in drug probes.

Offered by Rep. Lynn Jondahl, D-East Lansing, the amendment won votes of a majority of those on the floor, but not enough to attach it to the bill. The House voted to reconsider and the amendment will be taken up again Thursday.

The sponsor of the bills, Rep. Paul Rosenbaum, D-Battle Creek, says he wants to avoid forcing police to create costly squads of communications experts for tasks that might rarely be needed.

Opium Grows In Pakistani Hills

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer
DARHA, Northwest Frontier, Pakistan (AP) — Behind Zar Mohammad Afridi's craggy gun shop, across a dry river bed and up a steep bank, lies a field of thriving but illicitly cultivated poppy flowers from which opium-based narcotics are derived.

U.S. drug officials fear these narcotics may make their way from the dusty roads of Pakistan's semi-autonomous tribal area to Americans cities if the main foreign source for U.S. addicts — Mexico — is disconnected.

U.S. Officials Fear It As Source If Mexico Is Cut Off

Already, morphine sulfate tablets produced from the region's "haphim" — the local dialect's word for opium — have repeatedly turned up in large quantities in West Europe.

What makes it so difficult to stem the flow is that the opium here originates in rugged, isolated pockets near the Afghan border where the Pakistani government has little or no control and where cultivation of opium, smuggling and firearms manufacture are the inhabitants' traditional livelihoods.

The people of the tribal area are Pathans, the fiercely proud and independent descendants of warriors who long controlled the Khyber Pass, the historic passageway to Asia.

Never completely subdued, the Pathans today pay as little heed to Pakistani authorities as their forebears did to officials of the imperial British Raj which struggled for years to pacify their desolate homeland in the 19th century.

A resident of Marian Zai, several miles from Darra, said most farmers in the area grow opium for both sale to the government — the legal manner — and to black market dealers.

About half the crop goes to government agents for roughly $15.5 a pound and the remaining half is sold on the black market for twice the amount, he said. A U.S. drug official said a morphine sulfate fetches $5 to $6 per 35 grain tablet in Copenhagen.

On the same plot of land, "the money we make is as much as what we can get for growing sugar cane," the farmer said. "But haphim is much easier to transport to market."

A farmer in neighboring Maitani said he has stopped growing opium because the price of wheat has gone up, but would return to cultivating poppies when the wheat price drops.

"But just about everyone else grows it," he said.

Honesty Earns Man A C-Note

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — When Roger Oglesby, a city service department employee here, began digging for his lost watch in a leaf dump, he found the timepiece and also uncovered a billfold containing $1,700 in cash and a $20 gold certificate.

The wallet belonged to Oglesby's boss, foreman L.C. Davenport. Oglesby returned it and received a $100 reward from Davenport, who said "I think a man that honest deserves a mention."

Contest Barely Worth Risk

BAY CITY, Mich. (AP) — Some contestants in the Miss Nude Bay City pageant paid a high price for competing. They wound up in jail, but only after the judges picked a winner.

The 19-year-old top finisher won a $250 prize, which she might have to use to pay bail and hire a lawyer.

Police arrested her, two other contestants and a professional strip tease dancer for indecent exposure Monday night.

Each contestant danced in an evening dress, a bathing suit and then in the nude, police said.

Police escorted them out of the Cinema Arts Theater and to police headquarters for booking.

When it was announced there would be no encores, 300 men who had paid $10 apiece to see the crowning of Miss Nude Bay City stamped their feet and booed.

"The police told us before the show that if the girls got up on the stage and took their clothes off, they'd get arrested," said Russ Michalski, the theater's projectionist. "Well, that's what happened."

The winner was chosen by a panel of two barbers, two disc jockeys for local radio stations and an agent for country western singers.

PRISON TERM WORRIES 'BAD NEWS'

Barnes, Pistons Slumping

DETROIT (AP) — Marvin Barnes of the Detroit Pistons had more on his mind than a basketball game Wednesday night as the National Basketball Association team lost to the New Orleans Jazz, 95-89. Barnes was worried about going to prison.

If Detroit makes the playoffs, Barnes may skip the basketball court to serve his one-year term for probation violation.

Barnes, a 6-foot-9 forward who has not performed as well as he had hoped this season, had only five points and no rebounds in the loss to New Orleans. It was the Pistons fourth straight loss and their seventh in nine games.

For the Jazz, "Pistol Pete" Maravich scored 31 points, 25 in the first half, as the Jazz blew a 19-point lead, but rallied for the victory.

Maravich made two baskets and two freethrows in the second half, one early in the third period. But his second and the freethrows came with just over 90 seconds to go to help clinch the victory, the third in the last four games for the Jazz.

"I'm not mad at anybody," Barnes said after the loss. "I'll be in there with rapists and guys like that. The situation is bothering me. I've got to do my time and it's affecting me mentally and physically."

"I've been playing for this team with broken bones and a punched eye and all the dissection that's been on this team. I've been plugging along, trying to help the team make the playoffs."

The Pistons are in second place in the Midwest division and fighting to stay ahead of third-place Kansas City and fourth-place Chicago.

The Pistons, after trailing 64-45 four minutes into the third period, turned on a 21-8 spurt during the rest of the period and then hit the first four baskets of the fourth quarter to go in front 74-72.

Rookie center Leon Douglas and Al Eberhard led the uprising for Detroit.

The lead changed hands five times and tied five others before Detroit pulled in front 85-81 on two baskets by Howard Porter with 5:05 remaining.

The Jazz went on a 10-0 spurt as they blanked Detroit for almost 4½ minutes with two baskets and two freethrows by James McElroy to lead the surge.

Detroit closed the gap to 91-89

on two more basket by Douglas but Maravich and E.C. Coleman each had a pair of freethrows to put the game out of reach.

It marked the 22nd time this season that Maravich went over the 30-point mark in a game.

Douglas with 23 points and 15 rebounds set career highs in both departments.

Moses Malone and Calvin Murphy gave the Houston Rockets a present for Malone's birthday — combining for 48 points as the Central Division leaders became the first team to clinch a playoffs berth.

The Rockets did it by beating the Portland Trail Blazers 109-104 Wednesday night as Malone accounted for one point for each of his years — 23 — and Murphy had 25.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Kansas City Kings beat the New York Nets 107-96, the Washington Bullets edged the Cleveland Cavaliers 95-90, the Boston Celtics defeated the Atlanta Hawks 103-96, The Golden State Warriors downed the Philadelphia 76ers 128-120, the Los Angeles Lakers topped the Indiana Pacers 105-97 and the San Antonio Spurs edged the Denver Nuggets 122-120.

Portland closed within 102-101 against Houston with 2:08 to play. But Trail Blazers' center Bill Walton, who played most of the second half with five personal fouls, fouled out with 1:15 left. Malone sank the two free throws for a 104-101 Houston edge.

In a game played under protest after New York's Mike Bantom was ejected, former Nets Brian Taylor and Jim Eakins gave Kansas City its ninth victory in 11 games. Taylor, traded by the Nets last summer, scored 29 points, while Eakins had 14, all in the final period. Bantom was called for a personal foul, then official Don Murphy called a technical foul, saying, "You should have heard what he called me."

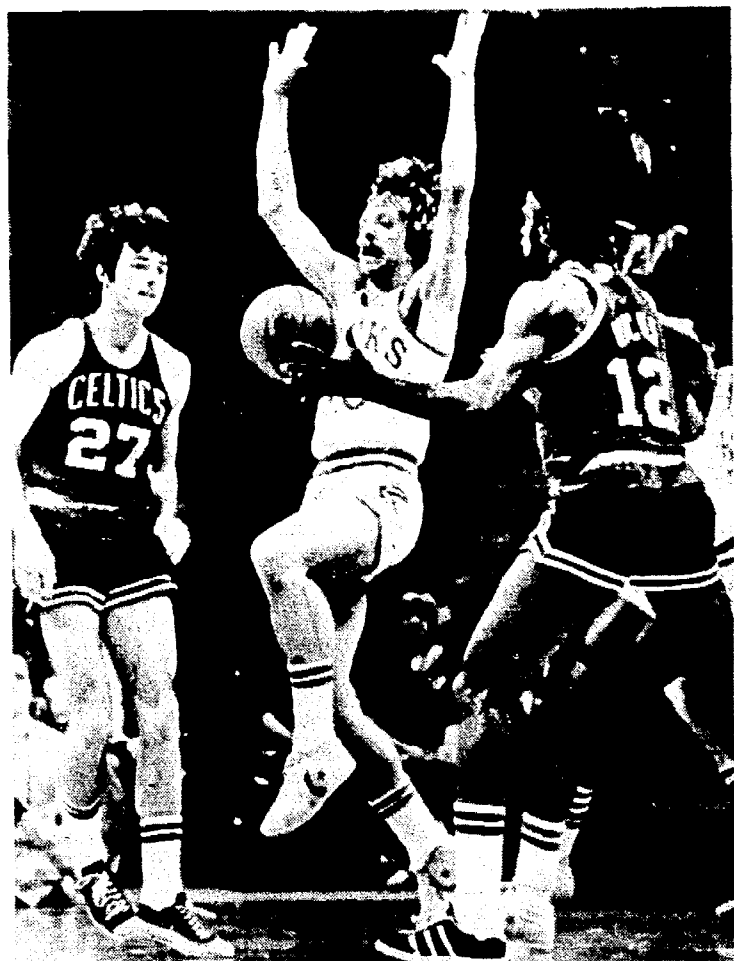

Wes Unseld scored a basket, then fired a long pass to Elvin Hayes for a fast-break stuff shot that put Washington ahead 83-75.

Sidney Wicks' 19 points boosted him past the 10,000-point career total and helped Boston overcome Atlanta's first-half lead.

Rick Barry scored 37 points for Golden State as the Warriors handed Philadelphia its first loss in five games. George McGinnis scored 34 for Philadelphia and Julius Erving added 28.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 26 points and Cazzie Russell 25, helping Los Angeles withstand a fourth-quarter Indiana rally. Billy Knight led the Pacers with 28 points.

A key steal by San Antonio's Mike Gale cut off a late rally by Denver, and George Gervin hit 38 points, offsetting some hot shooting by the Nuggets' David Thompson. Thompson finished with a season-high 44 points.

SCARE TACTICS?: John Brown of the Atlanta Hawks seems to be trying to scare the ball away from the basket during action in the Hawk-Boston game Wednesday in Atlanta. Sidney Wicks (12) of the Celtics passes the ball to teammate Kevin Stacom (27). Celtics won 103-96. (AP Wirephoto)

White Sox Trade Carroll

CHICAGO — The Chicago White Sox continued to make more puzzling trades as they sent ace reliever Clay Carroll to St. Louis for Lerin LeGrow.

Carroll was 4-4 with the 1976 Sox and saved six games. He was sidelined in midseason with a fractured finger.

LeGrow spent most of last season at Tulsa, but was a starter for the Detroit Tigers in 1974-75. His main claim to fame happened in the 1972 playoffs when Oakland shortstop Bert Campaneris, angered by a brush back pitch, hurled his bat at LeGrow.

Grote, Staton Honored

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. — Michigan placed guard Steve Grote and forward Tom Staton on the Big Ten Conference all-academic team.

Others named to the team were Indiana's Kent Benson, a unanimous choice, Purdue's Bruce Parkinson and Iowa's Cal Wulfsberg.

Grote is a three-time all-academic choice, only the fifth player to achieve such an honor. The second-highest vote getter, Grote was last year named to the Academic All-American team as the highest vote-getter among guards. Grote owns a 3.05 average in speech, radio and television.

Staton, a sophomore from Ferndale, has a 3.06 average.

Tarkanian Silent About NCAA Probe

Concerned With Tar Heels

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian, coach of fifth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, would just as soon skip the subject of his basketball team's investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Asked Wednesday if he thought word of the investigation leaked out of NCAA headquarters in hopes of hampering the Rebels' bid for the national championship, Tarkanian said, "I've got a lot of thoughts on that but it's best that I don't express any of them."

And he didn't. Asked if it might affect his team in the NCAA tournament, he replied, "I don't think so."

He seemed more concerned with No. 4 North Carolina, his opponent Saturday in the 4:15 p.m. EST nightcap of the NCAA semifinals in Atlanta's Omni.

"I've never seen a team that did so many things and did them well," Tarkanian said Wednesday during a telephone news conference involving the coaches of the four semifinal teams.

He especially expressed concern about the Carolina "four corners" offense, a delay game

often employed by Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith late in a game when his club is nursing a lead.

"A lot of teams are running the four corners," Tarkanian said. "It's not a matter of running it, it is how well you run it. It'll be new for us because we haven't seen anyone run it as well as Carolina."

"We get too much attention on our four corners," Smith said. "We also believe in the fast break. But no one does it any better than Vegas. We think we are surely facing the toughest team in the West. It will be one of the toughest tests we have faced."

The Tar Heels carry a 27-4 record into the game. Las Vegas has the top mark of the final four, 28-2.

Saturday's opener matches upstart North Carolina-Charlotte, 28-3 and ranked 17th, against No. 7 Marquette, 23-7.

UNCC also will employ the fast break, although the well-disciplined Sun Belt Conference champions also demonstrated considerable patience in rolling to victories over Syracuse and No. 1 Michigan in last week's Midwest Regionals.

Marquette, which loses veteran Coach Al McGuire to retirement after this tournament, is a defensive-minded club that likes to control the tempo of a game.

McGuire said he thought Charlotte's strong point was its "underdog type of attitude — all for one and one for all. I think this is the greatest asset you have."

He said he was sure UNCC had outstanding players and that he had read about Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, who "just seems to be a charming young guy. He seems to be the type of guy that can lead you to the national championship."

Maxwell is Charlotte's 6-foot-8 center, a silky-smooth operator who is averaging more than 20 points per game

Spectator Dies

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Cornell University officials say they are considering installing additional protective screening around the school's hockey rink following the death of a student spectator. Christopher Black, 19, of Morristown, N.J., died Monday in Upstate Medical Center. He was struck in the head by a hockey puck while watching a game between Cornell and Yale Dec. 3.

LUCKY SUIT: Marquette University coach Al McGuire carries his "lucky suit" into the Warriors gym Wednesday before his team began practice for this weekend's NCAA finals. McGuire has worn the three-piece outfit for each game down the regular season stretch and during the tournament. He says opponents "have no defense for it, unless they steal it." The Warriors will play Charlotte Saturday afternoon in the NCAA semifinals at Atlanta. (AP Wirephoto)

Rumors Spreading At Baseball Talks

A's, Orioles Up For Sale?

AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Major league baseball owners, with the exception of Oakland's Charles O. Finley, assembled for their annual spring meeting today amid rumors that Finley's A's as well as the Baltimore Orioles are up for sale.

The Associated Press learned Wednesday night that Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has been involved in talks concerning the possible sale of the Orioles.

Meanwhile, George Heidem, owner of the Jenkintown, Pa., Steel Co., told The AP he has held a number of talks with Finley about buying the A's.

Neither Heidem nor Finley is expected to attend today's owners' meeting. Heidem, who came close to buying the old Washington Senators in the 1960s, said he was invited but can't make it. And Finley said he won't be here because he fears a move by the other owners to buy up his team.

"I don't want to hurt their feelings, but I'm afraid they might try to buy my club," Finley said Wednesday from his Chicago home. "I'm not going to Tampa and I'm not sending anyone to represent me."

Later, Finley confirmed having talked with Heidem. He also told The AP that he would sell his team to his fellow major league owners "with one stipulation — that they agree to keep the club in Oakland for at least 10 years."

Such a sale, he added, would have to be "signed in blood." Informed sources told The AP that if either club is sold, it would be moved to Washington, D.C., and switched from the American League to the National, with limited interleague play beginning in 1978.

Details of the possible sale of the Orioles were extremely sketchy and the report was denied by club officials. But it was believed that board chairman Jerald C. Hoffberger wants to unload the club.

Kuhn was unavailable but The Baltimore Sun talked to Bob Wirz, director of public relations for the commissioner's office, who quoted Kuhn as saying: "I would deny that. I have not been involved in any such discussions."

General Manager Hank Peters said: "I can't comment officially on it because anything like that would have to come from Mr. Hoffberger, but I haven't heard a word about it, and I mean that sincerely. If anything were going on, I think I'd know about it."

Another report has baseball buying the A's from Finley, keeping the team in Oakland this season, then selling the franchise to Ed Cole, former chairman of the board of General Motors. The rumored price tag is $6 million, although Heidem indicated Finley's price is in the $8 million range. Cole would then move the franchise to Washington, satisfying a long-standing promise by Kuhn.

The franchise would switch to the National League, balancing the two leagues at 13 teams apiece. Presently, the AL has 14 teams and the NL has 12.

Finley's situation, under the heading of "franchise relocation," was one of the topics on the agenda of the owners, who were to meet in separate league sessions before joining for a general get-together.

Three-division play was another subject for discussion, with the AL virtually certain to approve it for 1978 and the NL having a better than even chance of accepting it.

Finalists Grab Three Spots On 'B' All-State Team

From ASSOCIATED PRESS
State finalist Dearborn Divine Child has a classic basketball combination — Mr. Inside and Mr. Outside.

Its opponent in the Class B state finals, Grandville, has a player who fills both roles.

Together, the two schools own three of the 10 positions on the

Divine Child's Al MacDonald and Dave Blazo and Grandville's Vince Vogg head this year's team. Rounding out the All-State squad are Kevin Nash of Southgate Aquinas, Ken Blackwell of River Rouge, Steve Rambold of Sturgis, Bob Bernier of Clawson, Joel Price of Saginaw Buena Vista, Eric Wurster of Milan and Tony Flanory of Flint Beecher. Grandville's Bill Gibson is Coach of the Year.

MacDonald is Dearborn's Mr. Outside, a tough defensive guard and brilliant floor leader who committed only 24 tur-noyers during a 20-game regular season. He averaged 12 points per game.

As part of a powerful front line, Blazo complemented MacDonald as Mr. Inside, muscling down 12 rebounds per game while leading the balanced Divine Child scoring attack with 17 points per game and a 42 per cent field goal average.

Vogg, a unanimous All-State selection, is a 6-foot-4 senior who played guard on offense and center-forward on defense. A transfer from Morley-Stanwood where he was a Class C All-Stater a year ago, Vogg led Grandville to an undefeated record with an 18.2 scoring average and "a lot of unselfish play," said Gibson.

A preseason High School All-American and unanimous All-

State choice, the 6-10, 215-pound Nash is a blue chip college prospect. Despite being double and triple teamed all season, he averaged 17 points and 17 rebounds per game.

While playing the small forward, the 6-1 Blackwell ran the River Rouge offense and defense, scoring 340 points (18 average) and grabbing 238 rebounds (12 average). He also hit 48 per cent of his field goal attempts.

Sturgis' big man, 6-8 senior center Rambold led his team to the state quarterfinals with a 21-point, 18-rebound per game average. He was toughest late in the season, averaging 27 points per game through the last 12.

Bernier, Clawson's 6-6 senior, averaged 26 points and 14 rebounds per game while leading his team to a 19-4 record. Bernier shot 59 per cent from the floor and set his school's single game scoring record with 42 against Madison.

Milan's 6-2 Wurster, Monroe County's Player of the Year, was a picture of consistency and versatility. He hit double figures in 20 of his team's 23 games, averaging 20.5 per game for the year. He also averaged 12 rebounds per game and led his team in assists, steals and blocked shots. He possesses a 33-inch vertical jump.

Price led Saginaw Buena Vista to the state semifinals with victories over such tough opponents as Fenton and Flint Beecher. The 6-5 Price, a tough shot blocker, averaged 16 points and 14 rebounds per game this year.

A three-year starter for Flint Beecher, the 6-6 Flanory was another unanimous All-State selection. He was No. 3 man on the state championship team of a year ago, but took over as leader this year. He averaged 18.9 points and nine rebounds per game.

Gibson took over the coaching reins at Grandville three years ago after moving from Clio. The year before he arrived, Grandville was 1-19. Since Gibson's arrival, the Bulldogs are 48-19, including this year's 26-0 record heading into the state finals.

This season, Grandville won its first conference title in 26 years, was ranked No. 4 in the final poll and advanced beyond the regional tournament for the first time in the school's history.

PRISON TERM WORRIES 'BAD NEWS'

Barnes, Pistons Slumping

DETROIT (AP) — Marvin Barnes of the Detroit Pistons had more on his mind than a basketball game Wednesday night as the National Basketball Association team lost to the New Orleans Jazz, 95-89. Barnes was worried about going to prison.

If Detroit makes the playoffs, Barnes may skip the basketball court to serve his one-year term for probation violation.

Barnes, a 6-foot-9 forward who has not performed as well as he had hoped this season, had only five points and no rebounds in the loss to New Orleans. It was the Pistons fourth straight loss and their seventh in nine games.

For the Jazz, "Pistol Pete" Maravich scored 31 points, 25 in the first half, as the Jazz blew a 19-point lead, but rallied for the victory.

Maravich made two baskets and two freethrows in the second half, one early in the third period. But his second and the freethrows came with just over 90 seconds to go to help clinch the victory, the third in the last four games for the Jazz.

"I'm not mad at anybody," Barnes said after the loss. "I'll be in there with rapists and guys like that. The situation is bothering me. I've got to do my time and it's affecting me mentally and physically."

"I've been playing for this team with broken bones and a punched eye and all the dissension that's been on this team. I've been plugging along, trying to help the team make the playoffs."

The Pistons are in second place in the Midwest division and fighting to stay ahead of third-place Kansas City and fourth-place Chicago.

The Pistons, after trailing 64-45 four minutes into the third period, turned on a 21-8 spurt during the rest of the period and then hit the first four baskets of the fourth quarter to go in front 74-72.

Rookie center Leon Douglas and Al Eberhard led the uprising for Detroit.

The lead changed hands five times and tied five others before Detroit pulled in front 85-81 on two baskets by Howard Porter with 5:05 remaining.

The Jazz went on a 10-0 spurt as they blanked Detroit for almost 4½ minutes with two baskets and two freethrows by James McElroy to lead the surge.

Detroit closed the gap to 91-89

on two more basket by Douglas but Maravich and E.C. Coleman each had a pair of freethrows to put the game out of reach.

It marked the 22nd time this season that Maravich went over the 30-point mark in a game.

Douglas with 23 points and 15 rebounds set career highs in both departments.

Moses Malone and Calvin Murphy gave the Houston Rockets a present for Malone's birthday — combining for 48 points as the Central Division leaders became the first team to clinch a playoffs berth.

The Rockets did it by beating the Portland Trail Blazers 109-104 Wednesday night as Malone accounted for one point for each of his years — 23 — and Murphy had 25.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Kansas City Kings beat the New York Nets 107-96, the Washington Bullets edged the Cleveland Cavaliers 95-90, the Boston Celtics defeated the Atlanta Hawks 103-96. The Golden State Warriors downed the Philadelphia 76ers 128-120, the Los Angeles Lakers topped the Indiana Pacers 105-97 and the San Antonio Spurs edged the Denver Nuggets 122-120.

Portland closed within 102-191 against Houston with 2:08 to play. But Trail Blazers' center Bill Walton, who played most of the second half with five personal fouls, fouled out with 1:15 left. Malone sank the two free throws for a 104-101 Houston edge.

In a game played under protest after New York's Mike Bantom was ejected, former Nets Brian Taylor and Jim Eakins gave Kansas City its ninth victory in 11 games. Taylor, traded by the Nets last summer, scored 29 points, while Eakins had 14, all in the final period. Bantom was called for a personal foul, then official Don Murphy called a technical foul, saying, "You should have heard what he called me."

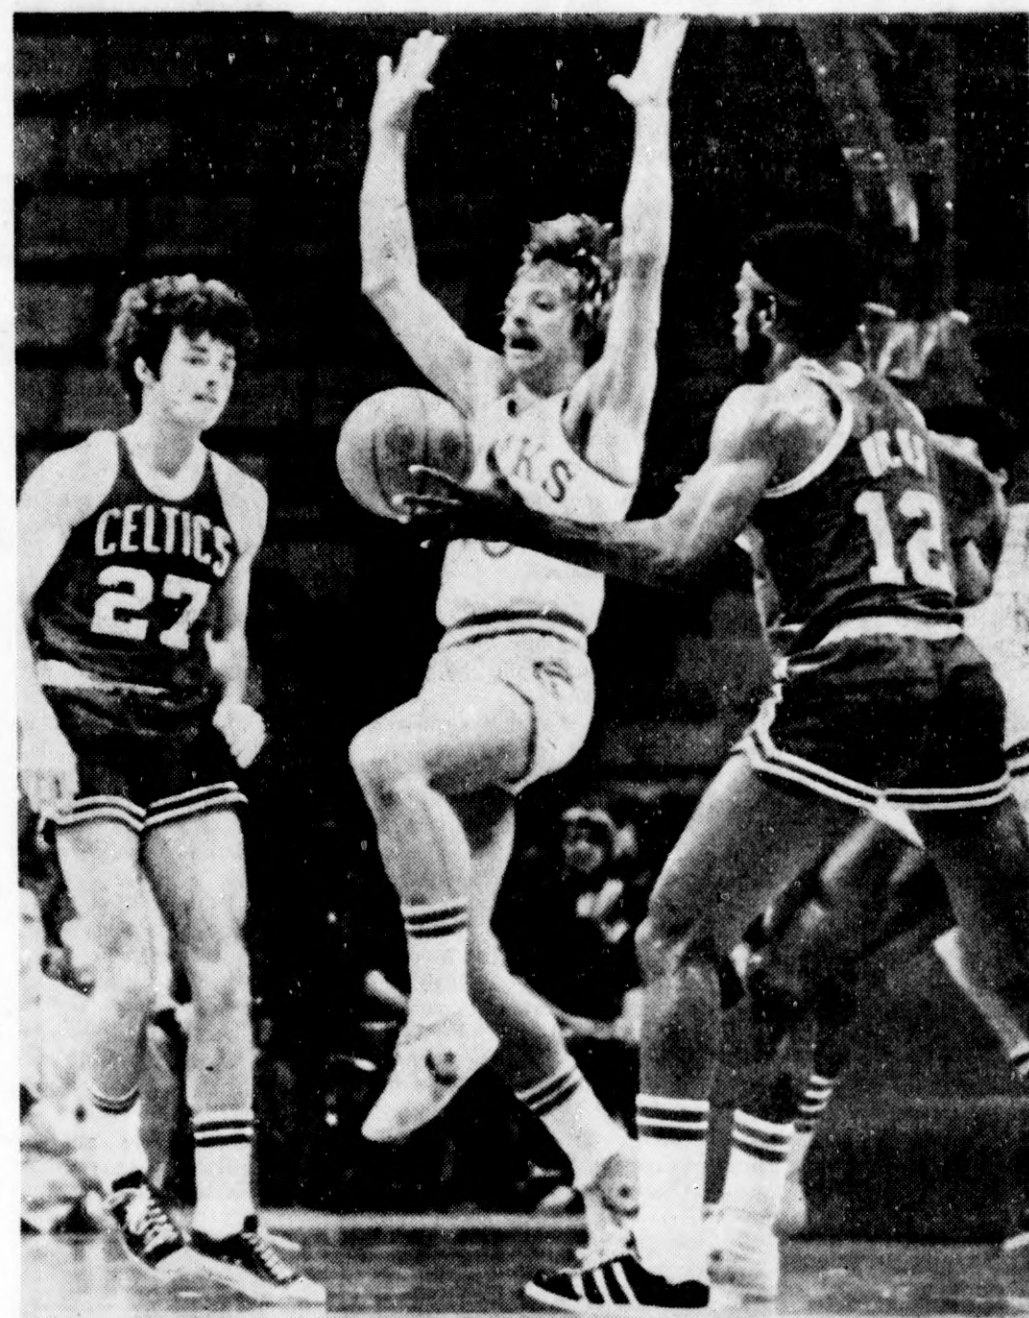

Wes Unseld scored a basket, then fired a long pass to Elvin Hayes for a fast-break stuff shot that put Washington ahead 83-75.

Sidney Wicks' 19 points boosted him past the 10,000-point career total and helped Boston overcome Atlanta's first-half lead.

Rick Barry scored 37 points for Golden State as the Warriors handed Philadelphia its first loss in five games. George McGinnis scored 34 for Philadelphia and Julius Erving added 28.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 26 points and Cazzie Russell 25, helping Los Angeles withstand a fourth-quarter Indiana rally. Billy Knight led the Pacers with 28 points.

A key steal by San Antonio's Mike Gale cut off a late rally by Denver, and George Gervin hit 38 points, offsetting some hot shooting by the Nuggets' David Thompson. Thompson finished with a season-high 44 points.

SCARE TACTICS?: John Brown of the Atlanta Hawks seems to be trying to scare the ball away from the basket during action in the Hawk-Boston game Wednesday in Atlanta. Sidney Wicks (12) of the Celtics passes the ball to teammate Kevin Stacom (27). Celtics won 103-96. (AP Wirephoto)

White Sox Trade Carroll

CHICAGO — The Chicago White Sox continued to make more puzzling trades as they sent ace reliever Clay Carroll to St. Louis for Lerin LeGrow.

Carroll was 4-4 with the 1976 Sox and saved six games. He was sidelined in midseason with a fractured finger.

LeGrow spent most of last season at Tulsa, but was a starter for the Detroit Tigers in 1974-75. His main claim to fame happened in the 1972 playoffs when Oakland shortstop Bert Campaneris, angered by a brush back pitch, hurled his bat at LeGrow.

Grote, Staton Honored

SCHAUMBURG, Ill. — Michigan placed guard Steve Grote and forward Tom Staton on the Big Ten Conference all-academic team.

Others named to the team were Indiana's Kent Benson, a unanimous choice, Purdue's Bruce Parkinson and Iowa's Cal Wulfsberg.

Grote is a three-time all-

academic choice, only the fifth player to achieve such an honor. The second-highest vote getter, Grote was last year named to the Academic All-American team as the highest vote-getter among guards. Grote owns a 3.05 average in speech, radio and television. Staton, a sophomore from Ferndale, has a 3.06 average.

Tarkanian Silent About NCAA Probe

AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Jerry Tarkanian, coach of fifth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, would just as soon skip the subject of his basketball team's investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Asked Wednesday if he thought word of the investigation leaked out of NCAA headquarters in hopes of hampering the Rebels' bid for the national championship, Tarkanian said, "I've got a lot of thoughts on that but it's best that I don't express any of them."

And he didn't. Asked if it might affect his team in the NCAA tournament, he replied, "I don't think so."

He seemed more concerned with No. 4 North Carolina, his opponent Saturday in the 4:15 p.m. EST nightcap of the NCAA semifinals in Atlanta's Omni.

"I've never seen a team that did so many things and did them well," Tarkanian said Wednesday during a telephone news conference involving the coaches of the four semifinal teams.

He especially expressed concern about the Carolina "four corners" offense, a delay game

often employed by Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith late in a game when his club is nursing a lead.

"A lot of teams are running the four corners," Tarkanian said. "It's not a matter of running it, it is how well you run it. It'll be new for us because we haven't seen anyone run it as well as Carolina."

"We get too much attention on our four corners," Smith said. "We also believe in the fast break. But no one does it any better than Vegas. We think we are surely facing the toughest team in the West. It will be one of the toughest tests we have faced."

The Tar Heels carry a 27-4 record into the game. Las Vegas has the top mark of the final four, 28-2.

Saturday's opener matches upstart North Carolina-Charlotte, 28-3 and ranked 17th, against No. 7 Marquette, 23-7.

UNCC also will employ the fast break, although the well-disciplined Sun Belt Conference champions also demonstrated considerable patience in rolling to victories over Syracuse and No. 1 Michigan in last week's Midwest Regionals.

Marquette, which loses veteran Coach Al McGuire to retirement after this tournament, is a defensive-minded club that likes to control the tempo of a game.

McGuire said he thought Charlotte's strong point was its "underdog type of attitude — all for one and one for all. I think this is the greatest asset you have."

He said he was sure UNCC had outstanding players and that he had read about Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, who "just seems to be a charming young guy. He seems to be the type of guy that can lead you to the national championship."

Maxwell is Charlotte's 6-foot-8 center, a silky-smooth operator who is averaging more than 20 points per game

Spectator Dies

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Cornell University officials say they are considering installing additional protective screening around the school's hockey rink following the death of a student spectator. Christopher Black, 19, of Morristown, N.J., died Monday in Upstate Medical Center. He was struck in the head by a hockey puck while watching a game between Cornell and Yale Dec. 3.

LUCKY SUIT: Marquette University coach Al McGuire carries his "lucky suit" into the Warriors gym Wednesday before his team began practice for this weekend's NCAA finals. McGuire has worn the three-piece outfit for each game down the regular season stretch and during the tournament. He says opponents "have no defense for it, unless they steal it." The Warriors will play Charlotte Saturday afternoon in the NCAA semifinals at Atlanta. (AP Wirephoto)

Rumors Spreading At Baseball Talks

A's, Orioles Up For Sale?

AP Sports Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Major league baseball owners, with the exception of Oakland's Charles O. Finley, assembled for their annual spring meeting today amid rumors that Finley's A's as well as the Baltimore Orioles are up for sale.

The Associated Press learned Wednesday night that Commissioner Bowie Kuhn has been involved in talks concerning the possible sale of the Orioles.

Meanwhile, George Heideman, owner of the Jenkintown, Pa., Steel Co., told The AP he has held a number of talks with Finley about buying the A's.

Neither Heideman nor Finley is expected to attend today's owners' meeting. Heideman, who came close to buying the old Washington Senators in the 1960s, said he was invited but can't make it. And Finley said he won't be here because he fears a move by the other owners to buy up his team.

"I don't want to hurt their feelings, but I'm afraid they might try to buy my club," Finley said Wednesday from his Chicago home. "I'm not going to Tampa and I'm not sending anyone to represent me."

Later, Finley confirmed having talked with Heideman. He also told The AP that he would sell his team to his fellow major league owners "with one stipulation — that they agree to keep the club in Oakland for at least 10 years."

Such a sale, he added, would have to be "signed in blood."

Informed sources told The AP that if either club is sold, it would be moved to Washington, D.C., and switched from the American League to the National, with limited interleague play beginning in 1978.

Details of the possible sale of the Orioles were extremely sketchy and the report was denied by club officials. But it was believed that board chairman Jerold C. Hoffberger wants to unload the club.

Kuhn was unavailable but The Baltimore Sun talked to Bob Wirz, director of public relations for the commissioner's office, who quoted Kuhn as saying: "I would deny that. I have not been involved in any such discussions."

General Manager Hank Peters said: "I can't comment officially on it because anything like that would have to come from Mr. Hoffberger, but I haven't heard a word about it, and I mean that sincerely. If anything were going on, I think I'd know about it."

Another report has baseball buying the A's from Finley, keeping the team in Oakland this season, then selling the franchise to Ed Cole, former chairman of the board of General Motors. The rumored price tag is $6 million, although Heideman indicated Finley's price is in the $8 million range. Cole would then move the franchise to Washington, satisfying a long-standing promise by Kuhn.

The franchise would switch to the National League, balancing the two leagues at 13 teams apiece. Presently, the AL has 14 teams and the NL has 12.

Finley's situation, under the heading of "franchise relocation," was one of the topics on the agenda of the owners, who were to meet in separate league sessions before joining for a general get-together.

Three-division play was another subject for discussion, with the AL virtually certain to approve it for 1978 and the NL having a better than even chance of accepting it.

Evert's Foes Say She's Showing Signs Of Strain

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — It may be little more than wishful thinking, but Chris Evert's contemporaries say they are beginning to detect some cracks in the armor of the world's No. 1 woman tennis player.

"The pressure on her is tremendous — I think she is beginning to show signs of the strain," says Rosie Casals, who at 28 and with the semi-retirement of Billie Jean King, is the grand dame of the ladies' pro circuit. "I find her looking more and more to outside interests."

"It is hard to become No. 1 and, once there, maintain it," adds Kristien Shaw. "She must always be asking herself, 'Where do I go from here?' She is her own biggest threat. She has set such high standards she is challenging the other young women to come up and be better."

One of the most formidable of these new challengers is Martina Navratilova, 20, the Czech defector who has beaten Chris once this year, won four tour events and leads Miss Evert in money winnings.

"It wouldn't be so hard if you just had to beat Chris on the court," Martina said. "But you have to beat her in the head. Her big edge is psychological. She is mentally tough. No one plays the important points better."

"But sometimes she seems to be dragging a weight on the court. I don't know how long she can stand going out there every day and hearing fans cheer against her."

The ladies take another shot at the incredible Miss Evert this weekend in the Virginia Slims Championship at Madison Square Garden, giving rise again to those inevitable questions: Who can beat her? How long can the stony Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., miss with the two-fisted backhand dominate women's ranks? Is there an heir on the horizon?

Holder of both the Wimbledon and U.S. crowns, winner of almost half a million dollars in prize money last season, Miss Evert, at 22, doesn't look like a candidate for early retirement.

In her entire professional career, only eight women have been able to beat her. Last year she dropped only four decisions on the circuit. She has built up commanding leads over her current rivals ... 18-4 over Navratilova, 20-1 over Casals, 20-5 over Virginia Wade. She is 8-7 over King and 18-11 over Yvonne Goolagong, now on maternity leave.

"Concentration, determination and consistency — they are the reasons she wins," insists Britain's Miss Wade, who has won two of her last three meetings with Chris. "She doesn't have a great deal of variety — spins and things like that. Basically, she hits the ball the same way all the time. So she can't go off that such. It takes a superior performance to beat her."

Chris herself listens to all of these assessments and prophecies, and smiles enigmatically.

"I have to put out 100 per cent to win," she says. "Eighty per cent is not enough. There's always pressure, certainly, but I try not to think about it."

"I get tired of the travel, the constant reminder that I have another match to play, then another. I find my mind wandering. That's when I take a break and go to dinner or a ballet."

"Two years from now? Who knows?"

Tiant Starts To Deliver After Signing New Pact

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Luis Tiant, signed and sealed, is starting to deliver.

The veteran right-hander made a belated spring training debut Wednesday and hurled two innings as the Boston Red Sox bowed to the Baltimore Orioles 3-2.

It was only Tiant's sixth day in camp following a contract hassle, and he threw 30 pitches, allowing one run and two hits — singles by Mark Belanger and Ken Singleton plus Eddie Murray's sacrifice fly — while walking one and striking out two.

"Last year I only pitched 20 innings down here but I was ready when the season started," Tiant said. "I think I'll be ready when the season starts

Immaculata Avoids Upset; Tennessee Tops Spartans

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Immaculata needed help to avoid being upset in the opening round of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIW) basketball tournament.

The help came from somewhere as the perennial Pennsylvania women's powerhouse rallied for an 83-73 victory Wednesday night in first-round action of the AIW tournament.

Cathy Rush, Immaculata's veteran coach, thought the Mighty Macs had all the help they needed following a pregame visit from evangelist Oral Roberts.

"I don't know what it did for the girls, but I told them what it meant to me," said Ms. Rush. "It was quite a thrill."

Tennessee Tech Coach Marynell Meadows thought Immaculata got all the help it needed from the officials.

"The officials must have read the paper and saw where Immaculata was supposed to win," charged Ms. Meadows after Tech's 83-73 defeat Wednesday night.

Baylor, Louisiana State, Mississippi College, Kansas State, Tennessee, Southern Connecticut and defending champion Delta State also claimed victories in opening-round games.

Baylor defeated St. Joseph's, Pa., 85-75, LSU stopped Western Washington 91-53, Missis-

siippi College bested Cal State Fullerton 97-84, Kansas State drilled Utah 70-32, Tennessee defeated Michigan State 76-62, Southern Connecticut bounced Missouri 80-61 and Delta State rumped past host Minnesota 87-43.

Southern Connecticut, 18-4, met Delta State, 29-3, and Tennessee, 26-4, played Kansas State, 24-10, in today's quarter-finals while LSU, 27-7, meets Baylor, 29-11, and Immaculata, 28-3, meets Mississippi College, 20-11, in tonight's games.

Mary Scharff scored 20 points and 6-foot-4 junior Sandy Miller added 19 6-points and 11 rebounds for Immaculata while Kim Grizzle scored 18 points for Tech, which dropped to 26-7.

Suzie Snider Eppers poured in 28 points to spark Baylor's victory, while Mary Sue Garrity's 26 led St. Joseph's, which dropped to 21-4.

Freshman Marcee Bennie, a member of the Australian Olympic team, poured in 40 points and grabbed 17 rebounds to lead LSU's victory while Joni Slagle scored 15 points for Western Washington, 21-6.

Senior Patricia Roberts totaled 31 points and 10 rebounds to spark Tennessee past Michigan State, which was led by Diane Spoelstra's 12 points. The Spartans dropped to 21-5.

Laurie Miller, a sophomore, scored 25 points and hauled in single and double.

The Cleveland Indians lost 9-5 to the San Francisco Giants, and the Atlanta Braves lost twice. John Ellis tied the game with his second home run and Tom Greve followed with the winner as the Texas Rangers beat one squad of Braves 9-8. Another group of Atlantics dropped a 10-inning 5-4 decision to the Houston Astros.

Houston star Cesar Cedeno suffered a torn ligament in the ring finger of his left hand during batting practice. He might have to go on the disabled list.

The St. Louis Cardinals unleashed an 18-hit attack and pounded the New York Mets 8-1. Brian Downing drove in five runs as the Chicago White Sox unloaded 18 hits and drubbed the Toronto Blue Jays 14-1 and Jason Thompson's two-run single highlighted a three-run eighth inning rally as the Detroit Tigers edged the Kansas City Royals 3-2.

Graig Nettles' three-run homer capped a six-run eighth inning that enabled the New York Yankees to beat the University of Florida 10-8, and Tim McCarver had three hits as Philadelphia turned back its Oklahoma City farm club 4-2 although Jim Kaat of the Phillies pitched for the minor league team.

Tiger Catcher Drives In Winner 'Fuss' Shows His Worth

By LARRY PALADINO
AP Sports Writer

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — John "Fuss" Wockenfuss may never know if the Detroit Tigers made much of a fuss over him when it came time to protect players in last fall's baseball expansion draft.

Indications are they didn't.

On Wednesday, he gave them reason to fuss by driving in the winning run in Detroit's 3-2 exhibition victory at Fort Myers against the Kansas City Royals. The victory was the Tigers' fourth straight in a 10-5 Grapefruit League record.

Wockenfuss said he does not have any idea if he was among the 15 players initially protected against the expansion selections of Seattle and Toronto. He probably wasn't, but he may not have even been one of the additional players added to the list after each selection was made.

"I asked them once and they would not tell me," the second-year catcher said. "They did not want to embarrass me, is the statement I heard."

Did Jim Campbell, general manager of the Tigers, tell him that?

"Yeah," Wockenfuss said.

Of the five players chosen from the Tigers by Seattle and Toronto, four were pitchers — Frank MacCormack, Bill Laxton, Dave Lemanczyk and Dennis DeBarr. The first player grabbed was first baseman-outfielder Dan Meyer.

The Tigers, who released veteran Bill Freehan in the offseason, have five catchers on their spring roster: Wockenfuss, Milt May, Bruce Kimm, former No. 1 draft choice Lance Parrish and Bob Adams.

Rookies Parrish and Adams are expected to be sent to the minors before the team heads north.

Wockenfuss, who hit .222 in 144 at bats last season, would have liked to have gone to one of the expansion teams because "every position is open. I'd get a shot at the first string catcher's job. If I did not make it, it would be my fault. If you're gonna make anything out of this game, you have to go where you play."

If Detroit did not protect him, perhaps the Tigers are breathing a sigh of relief that he was not taken. Wockenfuss went on to distinguish himself in winter ball in Puerto Rico.

The 28-year-old, six-foot, 190-pound righthanded hitter from Delaware was obtained in a minor league trade with St. Louis in December 1973. He had brief trials with the Tigers in 1974 and 1975 and played all of last season with Detroit.

He is 5-for-16 for a .312 batting average this spring training season. His double Wednesday drove in Steve Kemp with the winning run in the three-run eighth inning off Roger Nelson. Rookie Tim Corcoran opened the inning with a single, Jerry Manuel and Kemp walked and Jason Thompson ripped a two-run single before Wockenfuss's hit.

The Royal scored their runs in the first and fourth innings on RBI singles by Pete LaCock and Al Cowans off starter Ray Bare.

Court Won't Rule

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan Supreme Court has declined to take jurisdiction over court efforts to block construction of a proposed Detroit riverfront stadium.

The high court Wednesday rejected requests by Gov. William Milliken and Detroit Mayor Coleman Young that it decide a lawsuit over the bonding authority of municipalities.

The court said that "in view of the nature and significance of the issues involved," the case should have trial court determination and adequate chances for appeal.

A lawsuit in Wayne County Circuit Court filed by opponents of the city's proposed stadium claimed Detroit gave inadequate notice of its intentions to sell bonds for initial construction costs.

Milliken sought to get a quick final ruling to meet an April 6 deadline for starting construction and thus avoid the loss of some $5 million in federal funds for the project.

Evert's Foes Say She's Showing Signs Of Strain

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — It may be little more than wishful thinking, but Chris Evert's contemporaries say they are beginning to detect some chinks in the armor of the world's No. 1 woman tennis player.

"The pressure on her is tremendous — I think she is beginning to show signs of the strain," says Rosie Casals, who at 28 and with the semi-retirement of Billie Jean King, is the grand dame of the ladies' pro circuit. "I find her looking more and more to outside interests."

"It is hard to become No. 1 and, once there, maintain it," adds Kristien Shaw. "She must always be asking herself, 'Where do I go from here?' She is her own biggest threat. She has set such high standards she is challenging the other young women to come up and be better."

One of the most formidable of these new challengers is Martina Navratilova, 20, the Czech defector who has beaten Chris once this year, won four tour events and leads Miss Evert in money winnings.

"It wouldn't be so hard if you just had to beat Chris on the court," Martina said. "But you have to beat her in the head. Her big edge is psychological. She is mentally tough. No one plays the important points better."

"But sometimes she seems to be dragging a weight on the court. I don't know how long she can stand going out there every day and hearing fans cheer against her."

The ladies take another shot at the incredible Miss Evert this weekend in the Virginia Slims Championship at Madison Square Garden, giving rise again to those inevitable questions: Who can beat her? How long can the stony Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., miss with the two-fisted backhand dominate women's ranks? Is there an heir on the horizon?

Holder of both the Wimbledon and U.S. crowns, winner of almost half a million dollars in prize money last season, Miss Evert, at 22, doesn't look like a candidate for early retirement.

In her entire professional career, only eight women have been able to beat her. Last year she dropped only four decisions on the circuit. She has built up commanding leads over her current rivals ... 18-4 over Navratilova, 20-1 over Casals, 20-5 over Virginia Wade. She is 8-7 over King and 18-11 over Yvonne Goolagong, now on maternity leave.

"Concentration, determination and consistency — they are the reasons she wins," insists Britain's Miss Wade, who has won two of her last three meetings with Chris. "She doesn't have a great deal of variety — spins and things like that. Basically, she hits the ball the same way all the time. So she can't go off that such. It takes a superior performance to beat her."

Chris herself listens to all of these assessments and prophecies, and smiles enigmatically.

"I have to put out 100 per cent to win," she says. "Eighty per cent is not enough. There's always pressure, certainly, but I try not to think about it."

"I get tired of the travel, the constant reminder that I have another match to play, then another. I find my mind wandering. That's when I take a break and go to dinner or a ballet."

"Two years from now? Who knows?"

Tiant Starts To Deliver After Signing New Pact

From ASSOCIATED PRESS
Luis Tiant, signed and sealed, is starting to deliver.

The veteran right-hander made a belated spring training debut Wednesday and hurled two innings as the Boston Red Sox bowed to the Baltimore Orioles 3-2.

It was only Tiant's sixth day in camp following a contract hassle, and he threw 30 pitches, allowing one run and two hits — singles by Mark Belanger and Ken Singleton plus Eddie Murray's sacrifice fly — while walking one and striking out two.

"Last year I only pitched 20 innings down here but I was ready when the season started," Tiant said. "I think I'll be ready when the season starts this year, too."

Before taking the mound, Tiant finally signed his newly extended contract. Terms were not disclosed but it was believed his $180,000-per-year contract was extended through 1978, with an option for 1979.

After Tiant left the game, Tom House allowed two decisive runs on a single by Belanger, a double by Singleton and a single by Murray.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Dodgers, who hope to challenge Cincinnati's world champions in the National League West, scored twice in the first inning on RBI hits by Reggie Smith and Rick Monday and nipped the Reds 2-1 behind the seven-hit pitching of Doug Rau and Charlie Hough.

Even though Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley claimed the American League West for his team, the A's, were not listening. They dropped a 9-8 decision to the Chicago Cubs, who rallied for three runs in the ninth inning on Gene Clines' triple, an error, Joe Wallis' single and Dave Rosello's two-run double.

The San Diego Padres hammered three Seattle pitchers for 20 hits, including five triples, and needed all of them to beat the Mariners 17-15.

The Milwaukee Brewers out-homered California 6-5 — Gorman Thomas hit a pair — and edged the Angels 10-9. The Minnesota Twins bowed to the Montreal Expos 4-1 as Tony Perez drove in two runs with a single and double.

The Cleveland Indians lost 9-5 to the San Francisco Giants, and the Atlanta Braves lost twice. John Ellis tied the game with his second home run and Tom Grieve followed with the winner as the Texas Rangers beat one squad of Braves 9-8. Another group of Atlantics dropped a 10-inning 5-4 decision to the Houston Astros.

Houston star Cesar Cedeno suffered a torn ligament in the ring finger of his left hand during batting practice. He might have to go on the disabled list.

The St. Louis Cardinals unleashed an 18-hit attack and pounded the New York Mets 8-1. Brian Downing drove in five runs as the Chicago White Sox unloaded 18 hits and drubbed the Toronto Blue Jays 14-4 and Jason Thompson's two-run single highlighted a three-run eighth inning rally as the Detroit Tigers edged the Kansas City Royals 3-2.

Graig Nettles' three-run homer capped a six-run ninth inning that enabled the New York Yankees to beat the University of Florida 10-9, and Tim McCarver had three hits as Philadelphia turned back its Oklahoma City farm club 4-2 although Jim Kaat of the Phillies pitched for the minor league team.

Immaculata Avoids Upset; Tennessee Tops Spartans

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Immaculata needed help to avoid being upset in the opening round of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIWA) basketball tournament.

The help came from somewhere as the perennial Pennsylvania women's powerhouse rallied for an 83-73 victory Wednesday night in first-round action of the AIWA tournament.

Cathy Rush, Immaculata's veteran coach, thought the Mighty Macs had all the help they needed following a pregame visit from evangelist Oral Roberts.

"I don't know what it did for the girls, but I told them what it meant to me," said Ms. Rush. "It was quite a thrill."

Tennessee Tech Coach Marynell Meadors thought Immaculata got all the help it needed from the officials.

"The officials must have read the paper and saw where Immaculata was supposed to win," charged Ms. Meadors after Tech's 83-73 defeat Wednesday night.

Baylor, Louisiana State, Mississippi College, Kansas State, Tennessee, Southern Connecticut and defending champion Delta State also claimed victories in opening-round games.

siippi College bested Cal State Fullerton 97-84, Kansas State drilled Utah 70-32, Tennessee defeated Michigan State 76-62, Southern Connecticut bounced Missouri 80-64 and Delta State romped past host Minnesota 87-43.

Southern Connecticut, 18-4, met Delta State, 29-3, and Tennessee, 26-4, played Kansas State, 24-10, in today's quarter-finals while LSU, 27-7, meets Baylor, 29-11, and Immaculata, 28-3, meets Mississippi College, 20-11, in tonight's games.

Mary Scharff scored 20 points and 6-foot-4 junior Sandy Miller added 19 6-points and 11 rebounds for Immaculata while Kim Grizzle scored 18 points for Tech, which dropped to 26-7.

Suzie Snider Eppers poured in 28 points to spark Baylor's victory, while Mary Sue Garrity's 26 led St. Joseph's, which dropped to 21-4.

Freshman Marcee Bennie, a member of the Australian Olympic team, poured in 40 points and grabbed 17 rebounds to lead LSU's victory while Joni Slagle scored 15 points for Western Washington, 21-6.

Senior Patricia Roberts totaled 31 points and 10 rebounds to spark Tennessee past Michigan State, which was led by Diane Spoelstra's 12 points. The Spartans dropped to 23-5.

Laurie Miller, a sophomore, scored 25 points and hauled in 13 rebounds to lead Kansas State by Utah, Soni Adams' 12 points led Utah, now 24-2.

Freda Craft and Tessa Townsend divided 40 points to help Mississippi College oust Cal State Fullerton, 19-3. Sophomore Brenda Martin scored 17 points for Fullerton.

Six-one junior Marnee Dacko scored 22 points to lead Southern Connecticut's Owls by Missouri, 15-6. Nancy Rutter led the losing Tigers with 18 points and 12 rebounds.

Bruins, Sabres Keep Pace

Wings' Winless String Reaches 12

From ASSOCIATED PRESS
It is a time when teams struggling for playoff positions in the National Hockey League have to fight the temptation to watch the scoreboard and see how the competition is doing.

Boston Coach Don Cherry insists, for example, that "we cannot afford to worry about Buffalo," although the Bruins trail the first-place Sabres by four points in the Adams Division. "We have to play our schedule game by game. We have one game left with them at Buffalo, and it could be a key one for first place."

It could be, indeed, considering that both teams won Wednesday night — keeping the margin at four points. Boston has one more game to play than Buffalo, which has five games remaining.

The Sabres won for the 18th time in 25 games, besting Cleveland 4-2 and ruining the coaching debut of Harry Howell, who took over for Jack Evans. Evans was absent because of personal business.

The Bruins got a goal and three assists from Gregg Sheppard, while goalie Gerry Cheevers stopped 29 shots in picking up his third shutout of the season as Boston blanked the Detroit Red Wings 6-0.

The loss, Detroit's ninth by shutout this season, extended the Red Wings' winless string to 12 games. The Bruins scored two goals in each period, taking advantage of three Detroit penalties, and registered another goal while they were shorthanded themselves.

Jean Ratelle opened the scoring at 8:51 of the first period while Detroit's Dennis Polonich was serving a slashing penalty and Doug Halward notched his first of the season and his second in the NHL at 16:34 of the same period.

Detroit defenseman Al Cameron and J.P. LeBlanc were in the penalty box with LeBlanc sitting out a slashing penalty to Wings netminder Terry Richardson when Sheppard ran the count to 3-0 at 16:44 of the middle period and Terry O'Reilly made it 4-0 on the second powerplay 63 seconds later.

Boston's O'Reilly was off for elbowing when the Bruins penalty killing forwards caught the Wings up ice and Dave Forbes made it 5-0 at 8:21 and less than a minute later Rick Middleton wound up the scoring with help from Ratelle and Stan Jonathan.

In other NHL games, the New York Rangers downed Colorado 5-3, extending the Rockies' winless streak to 15 games; the Los Angeles Kings defeated the Chicago Black Hawks 3-1, and the Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Islanders skated to a 1-1 tie.

In the World Hockey Association, the Birmingham Bulls blanked the Phoenix Roadrunners 4-0 and the Quebec Nordiques beat the Cincinnati Stingers 6-4.

Rick Martin scored his 36th goal of the season, helping the Sabres build a 4-0 lead.

Buffalo goalie Don Edwards lost his shutout when Cleveland's Wayne Merrick caught the Sabres changing defensemen and scored on a breakaway.

Defensesman Jocelyn Guevremont could not get on the ice fast enough because his pants got caught on the door handle of the Sabres' bench.

Second-period goals by Rod Gilbert, Greg Polis and Ken Hodge lifted the Rangers past Colorado, which took three one-goal leads but lost for the 12th time — with three ties — in its last 15 games.

Bob Murdoch scored two goals, carrying Los Angeles past Chicago and bringing the Kings within two points of second-place Pittsburgh in the Norris Division. The loss left the Black Hawks in a second-place tie with Vancouver in the Smythe Division.

Stan Weir's power play goal with 11:08 remaining gave Toronto its tie with the Islanders, who drew within two points of first-place Philadelphia in the Patrick Division.

Serge Bernier's tie-breaking goal with 1:43 remaining led Quebec past Cincinnati. He added an open-net goal with five seconds left.

Mark Napier scored his 57th goal of the season and John Garrett stopped 43 shots for his fourth shutout of the season as Birmingham beat Phoenix.

His ailing back forced him out of a shot at the Masters, April 7-10 in Augusta, Ga. this year.

"Following doctor's orders, Mr. Trevino is at home (in Santa Teresa, N.M.) resting and taking whirlpool treatments," his office said. "He is not available for comment."

His office confirmed, however, that Trevino sent a telegram to Masters officials last Friday withdrawing from the tournament.

Trevino underwent major back surgery last year and did not play until the Jackie Gleason-Liverrary Classic Feb. 24. He finished in a tie for 39th in that event, tied for 75th the following week. The week after that, at the Doral Open, he missed the cut for the final two rounds.

Although he finished each competitive round gray-faced with fatigue, he insisted "the back's okay." He complained of weakness, however, in both his back and legs. "I just can't generate any power," he said.

HIP-CHECKED: Larry Skinner of the Colorado Rockies goes flying as he is hip-checked by the New York Rangers' Dave Maloney during the third period of their game at Madison Square Garden Wednesday night. No penalty was called. The Rangers won 5-3. (AP Wirephoto)

Ailing Lee Trevino Will Miss Masters

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer
HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Lee Trevino is skipping the Masters again — and this time it's not his idea.

"He did this on doctor's orders," a spokesman for Trevino's office in El Paso, Tex., said Wednesday, confirming a report by The Associated Press that the flamboyant Trevino — deeply troubled by a bad back — had withdrawn from the prestigious Masters, the first of the year's four major tests of golfing greatness.

In earlier years, Trevino had created a national furor by boycotting the esteemed Masters because, he said at the time, the Augusta National Golf Club course was not suited to his game.

Since winning the PGA national championship in 1974, however, Trevino has called a Masters title one of the prime goals of his career.

"I've got a chance at becoming only the fifth man in history to win all the Big Four," he said. "I'd be foolish not to try to make it. After all, Gent Sarazen, Ben Hogan, Jack Nicklaus and Gary Player make pretty good company."

They are the only players ever to win all four major titles — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA. Trevino, one of the game's premier players and among the most popular players golf has ever known, won the U.S. Open in 1968 and 1971 and the British Open in 1971 and 1972.

His ailing back forced him out of a shot at the Masters, April 7-10 in Augusta, Ga. this year.

Bruins, Sabres Keep Pace

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

It is a time when teams struggling for playoff positions in the National Hockey League have to fight the temptation to watch the scoreboard and see how the competition is doing.

Boston Coach Don Cherry insists, for example, that "we cannot afford to worry about Buffalo," although the Bruins trail the first-place Sabres by four points in the Adams Division. "We have to play our schedule game by game. We have one game left with them at Buffalo, and it could be a key one for first place."

It could be, indeed, considering that both teams won Wednesday night — keeping the margin at four points. Boston has one more game to play than Buffalo, which has five games remaining.

The Sabres won for the 18th time in 25 games, besting Cleveland 4-2 and ruining the coaching debut of Harry Howell, who took over for Jack Evans. Evans was absent because of personal business.

The Bruins got a goal and three assists from Gregg Sheppard, while goalie Gerry Cheevers stopped 29 shots in picking up his third shutout of the season as Boston blanked the Detroit Red Wings 6-0.

The loss, Detroit's ninth by shutout this season, extended the Red Wings' winless string to 12 games. The Bruins scored two goals in each period, taking advantage of three Detroit penalties, and registered another goal while they were shorthanded themselves.

Jean Ratelle opened the scoring at 8:51 of the first period while Detroit's Dennis Polonich was serving a slashing penalty and Doug Halward notched his first of the season and his second in the NHL at 16:34 of the same period.

Detroit defenseman Al Cameron and J.P. LeBlanc were in the penalty box with LeBlanc sitting out a slashing penalty to Wings netminder Terry Richardson when Sheppard ran the count to 3-0 at 16:44 of the middle period and Terry O'Reilly made it 4-0 on the second powerplay 63 seconds later.

Boston's O'Reilly was off for elbowing when the Bruins penalty killing forwards caught the Wings up ice and Dave Forbes made it 5-0 at 8:21 and less than a minute later Rick Middleton wound up the scoring with help from Ratelle and Stan Jonathan.

In other NHL games, the New York Rangers downed Colorado 5-3, extending the Rockies' winless streak to 15 games; the Los Angeles Kings defeated the Chicago Black Hawks 3-1, and the Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Islanders skated to a 1-1 tie.

In the World Hockey Association, the Birmingham Bulls blanked the Phoenix Roadrunners 4-0 and the Quebec Nordiques beat the Cincinnati Stingers 6-4.

Rick Martin scored his 36th goal of the season, helping the Sabres build a 4-0 lead.

Buffalo goalie Don Edwards lost his shutout when Cleveland's Wayne Merrick caught the Sabres changing defensemen and scored on a breakaway. Defenseman Jocelyn Guevremont could not get on the ice fast enough because his pants got caught on the door handle of the Sabres' bench.

Second-period goals by Rod Gilbert, Greg Polis and Ken Hodge lifted the Rangers past Colorado, which took three one-goal leads but lost for the 12th time — with three ties — in its last 15 games.

Bob Murdoch scored two goals, carrying Los Angeles past Chicago and bringing the Kings within two points of second-place Pittsburgh in the Norris Division. The loss left the Black Hawks in a second-place tie with Vancouver in the Smythe Division.

Stan Weir's power play goal with 11:08 remaining gave Toronto its tie with the Islanders, who drew within two points of first-place Philadelphia in the Patrick Division.

Serge Bernier's tie-breaking goal with 1:43 remaining led Quebec past Cincinnati. He added an open-net goal with five seconds left.

Mark Napier scored his 57th goal of the season and John Garrett stopped 43 shots for his fourth shutout of the season as Birmingham beat Phoenix.

His office confirmed, however, that Trevino sent a telegram to Masters officials last Friday withdrawing from the tournament.

Trevino underwent major back surgery last year and did not play until the Jackie Gleason-Ivory Classic Feb. 24. He finished in a tie for 39th in that event, tied for 75th the following week. The week after that, at the Doral Open, he missed the cut for the final two rounds.

Hiller Sees Big Rivalry Between Detroit, Toronto

By LARRY PALADINO

AP Sports Writer

LAKELAND, Fla. — Canadians living across the river from Detroit aren't going to desert baseball's Tigers just because Toronto has joined the American League, according to John Hiller.

Instead, the Tiger relief pitching star says interest in the Tigers could be enhanced by the new presence of the Toronto Blue Jays.

"I've talked to a lot of people down here from London and Leamington (Ont.)," Toronto native Hiller said during a break in spring training. "I don't think they will change their loyalties but I think it will be a big rivalry."

Other knowledgeable baseball people also anticipate a strong rivalry between the teams from the two cities.

"You're probably going to have a lot of people from Ontario who are Tiger fans driving to Toronto once in a while to watch them play there," Hiller said.

Windsor, Ont., is a five-minute drive over the Ambassador Bridge or through the Detroit-Windsor Tunnel from downtown Detroit. The daily newspaper, the Windsor Star, regularly staffs Tiger games.

It has two members in the Detroit chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America — Jack Dulmage and Ken Fathens. Matt Dennis, who handles the Tigers' box scores for The Associated Press, is from Point Harrow, Ont.

Canadian radio and television stations also cover the Tiger games on a fairly regular basis and there are indications many Canadians are fans. The Tigers even hold a "Windsor Night" promotion.

Besides Hiller, Detroit not along ago had Canadian pitcher Mike Kilkenny on its roster.

Detroit's first series against the Blue Jays is in Toronto, April 11-14. The Jays' first trip to Detroit is June 14-16.

"I don't plan on visiting too many people," Hiller said of his first trip with the Tigers to Toronto. "That is too difficult. If you visit one relative, you have to visit them all. And I have about 30 relatives up there."

"It will be fun seeing old schoolchums I have not seen in 10 or 12 years," he said.

Hiller, a product of Toronto's sandlots, said the city has "a super program" but he does not think the Blue Jays' presence will mean more Canadian players will get shots at the major leagues.

"With the scouting system the way it is now, I don't think anybody is overlooked," he said.

The 34-year-old lefthander, who was signed by Detroit in 1962, is one of only three Tigers left from the 1968 team that beat St. Louis in the World Series.

Hiller suffered a heart attack in January 1971, missed all that season, half of 1972, then came back to become a brilliant reliever.

Since then, he has posted a 40-30 record, a 2.22 earned-run average with 81 saves and 476 strikeouts in 486 innings.

Hiller would not be anxious to go to his old hometown in a trade.

"I would not mind playing for the Twins if there ever was a trade in the winds," said the Duluth, Minn., resident.

Spartans Split

EHRENBERG, Ariz. (AP) — Run-stingy Southeast Oklahoma State added Michigan State to its list of victims Wednesday as it blanked the Spartans 1-0 in a Citrus Baseball Tournament game.

The victory ran the winners' record to 19 straight, including 14 shutouts.

MSU collected only four hits off winner Savage Hurley, while MSU southpaw Sherman Johnson was almost as tight, holding the winners to five hits.

In an earlier tournament encounter Wednesday, MSU edged Wright State, 4-2, with a triple play engineered by Randy Pruitt helping the cause. Pruitt made a shoestring catch of a bunt to start the play, tagged first for the second out and threw to second to complete the three-out.

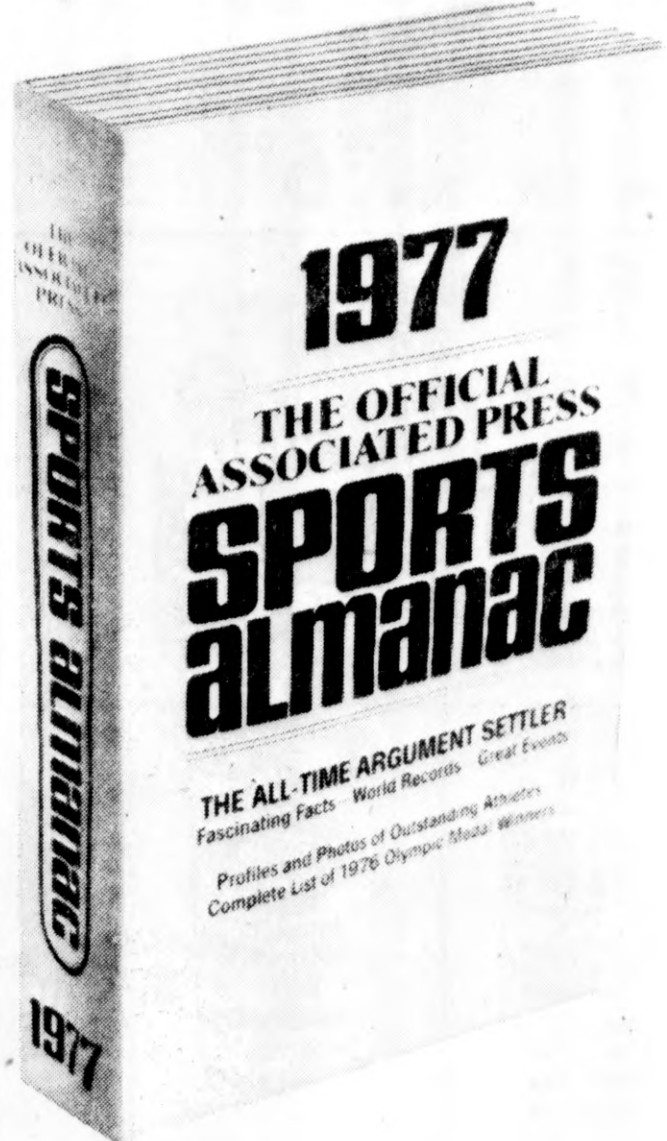

A two-run homer by Jerry Weller and doubles by Ken Robinson and Tony Wenson were the big blows in the Spartans attack.

The split left MSU at 2-4 in the training season and 1-3 in the tournament.

Preacher Rescues Slumping Bowlers

NEW YORK (AP) — "I've always wanted to knock down bowling pins for money," says Joe Stout. "I've been fortunate enough to have the opportunity to do it. But I've also been lucky to find other ways to make myself useful."

You won't find Joe Stout's name among the leading money winners of the Professional Bowlers Association tour. Nor can you expect to see him on television, battling the stars for tournament championships. Stout is happy enough when he earns a check in a tour event.

But Joe Stout may be one of the most influential men on the PBA tour. Aside from his prowess as a bowler, Stout is a preacher. He also helps his fellow bowlers overcome mental and psychological problems through hypnosis.

"This is my third try at the tour," says Stout, 46, a native of Tazewell, Va. "Or maybe I should say it's the third time the tour has tried me. I first came out in 1960, had a 212 average and was in 22nd place. I quit the tour, went to work in bowling promotion and instruction and opened a 32-lane alley in Fort Worth, Tex.

"It was then that I first toyed with the idea of preaching. I enrolled in Harding College in Arkansas, but got the itch to try the tour again in 1964. So it was back to work on my game."

"I made enough money in local tournaments to finance a few stops on the tour in 1965, but again I failed. I was a conditioned player — too used to set conditions on the lanes in my area. I couldn't adjust to varying lane conditions on the tour. I got into preaching full time."

Stout is a member of the Church of Christ. He has spoken on behalf of the church for nearly a decade, raising funds, spreading the word of God, but never losing his desire to "knock down pins for money."

"Unlike other churches, the Church of Christ doesn't elevate its preachers above the laity," he notes. "There is a set of elders who are the church leaders, but the preachers and the members are placed on equal levels."

"I try to visit an affiliated church in each city the tour stops at. A couple of weeks ago in Connecticut I visited a church with a completely black congregation. I lectured there and afterwards one of the members came up to me with a handful of money. I gladly accepted money for bowling, but I certainly don't want to be paid for speaking at a church."

Stout admits to not earning enough money on the tour to make a living, but he has found a way to help himself and his fellow bowlers.

"All of the guys out here are strong in the basics of the game, they know all of the mechanics," Stout says. "There are no instructors on the tour because the bowlers don't need physical instructions."

"But, when a guy goes through a slump — and mostly everybody out here does at some time — much of their problems is mental. That's where hypnosis is helpful."

At first, Stout would approach a compatriot having trouble, offering to help him through hypnosis. More recently, especially in the light of his success with past students, the slump-ridden bowlers are coming to him.

"One of the first players I helped made it to the TV finals the following week," Stout recalls. "He gave me some credit and some of the other guys came to me. I've worked with more than a dozen of the better bowlers."

"I tell them right off that I am not adding a skill to their talents, nor is hypnosis some sort of magical solution to their problems. I make them understand that we are going to try to intensify their concentration to better their performance."

"There is a set routine that we try to make clear in their minds. It is triggered by the ball return. I want the bowler to enact exactly what the ball is going to do in his mind before he rolls. It is a mental rehearsal really. Everything that he must do after picking up the ball is clear in his mind before he does it."

"Perhaps the most important thing the hypnosis does is to restore confidence in a player. I don't want the hypnosis to be a crutch. Once a player has gotten his confidence back, I think it's best he get away from the hypnosis."

Not only has the hypnosis been profitable for his students, many of whom are big money winners on the tour, but it has provided a windfall for Stout.

"I would like to depend on my bowling as a living," says Stout. "but I can't. So I've been able to find other ways to accomplish things."

"I try to live by what Thomas Edison once said: 'Learn from your mistakes. Each failure should be used in a positive way.'"

Preacher Rescues Slumping Bowlers

NEW YORK (AP) — "I've always wanted to knock down bowling pins for money," says Joe Stout. "I've been fortunate enough to have the opportunity to do it. But I've also been lucky to find other ways to make myself useful."

You won't find Joe Stout's name among the leading money winners of the Professional Bowlers Association tour. Nor can you expect to see him on television, battling the stars for tournament championships. Stout is happy enough when he earns a check in a tour event.

But Joe Stout may be one of the most influential men on the PBA tour. Aside from his prowess as a bowler, Stout is a preacher. He also helps his fellow bowlers overcome mental and psychological problems through hypnosis.

"This is my third try at the tour," says Stout, 46, a native of Taylors, Fla. "Or maybe I should say it's the third time the tour has tried me. I first came out in 1960, had a 212 average and was in 22nd place. I quit the tour, went to work in bowling promotion and instruction and opened a 32-lane alley in Fort Worth, Tex.

"It was then that I first toyed with the idea of preaching. I enrolled in Harding College in Arkansas, but got the itch to try the tour again in 1964. So it was back to work on my game.

"I made enough money in local tournaments to finance a few stops on the tour in 1965, but again I failed. I was a conditioned player — too used to set conditions on the lanes in my area. I couldn't adjust to varying lane conditions on the tour. I got into preaching full time."

Stout is a member of the Church of Christ. He has spoken on behalf of the church for nearly a decade, raising funds, spreading the word of God, but never losing his desire to "knock down pins for money."

"Unlike other churches, the Church of Christ doesn't elevate its preachers above the laity," he notes. "There is a set of elders who are the church leaders, but the preachers and the members are placed on equal levels."

"I try to visit an affiliated church in each city the tour stops at. A couple of weeks ago in Connecticut I visited a church with a completely black congregation. I lectured there and afterwards one of the members came up to me with a handful of money. I gladly accept money for bowling, but I certainly don't want to be paid for speaking at a church."

Stout admits to not earning enough money on the tour to make a living, but he has found a way to help himself and his fellow bowlers.

"All of the guys out here are strong in the basics of the game, they know all of the mechanics," Stout says. "There are no instructors on the tour because the bowlers don't need physical instructions."

"But, when a guy goes through a slump — and mostly everybody out here does at some time — much of their problems is mental. That's where hypnosis is helpful."

At first, Stout would approach a compatriot having trouble, offering to help him through hypnosis. More recently, especially in the light of his success with past students, the slump-ridden bowlers are coming to him.

"One of the first players I helped made it to the TV finals the following week," Stout recalls. "He gave me some credit and some of the other guys came to me. I've worked with more than a dozen of the better bowlers."

"I tell them right off that I am not adding a skill to their talents, nor is hypnosis some sort of magical solution to their problems. I make them understand that we are going to try to intensify their concentration to better their performance."

"There is a set routine that we try to make clear in their minds. It is triggered by the ball return. I want the bowler to enact exactly what the ball is going to do in his mind before he rolls. It is a mental rehearsing really. Everything that he must do after picking up the ball is clear in his mind before he does it."

"Perhaps the most important thing the hypnosis does is to restore confidence in a player. I don't want the hypnosis to be a crutch. Once a player has gotten his confidence back, I think it's best he get away from the hypnosis."

Not only has the hypnosis been profitable for his students, many of whom are big money winners on the tour, but it has provided a windfall for Stout.

"I would like to depend on my bowling as a living," says Stout, "but I can't. So I've been able to find other ways to accomplish things."

"I try to live by what Thomas Edison once said: 'Learn from your mistakes. Each failure should be used in a positive way.'"

Rich Gossage Glad He Escaped From Sox 'Circus'

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Relief pitcher Rich Gossage acts like a guy who was just released from human bondage.

Gossage rubbed his hands over his Pittsburgh uniform and said he couldn't believe he had escaped from a three-ring circus known as the Chicago White Sox.

"It was unbelievable in Chicago," said Gossage, who was made a starter last season after establishing himself as the relief ace of the American League a year earlier. "You felt you had to pitch a shutout to tie."

Gossage waved his hand around the Pirates' locker room and said "it's great to be here. This is like being in the All-Star camp compared with what I was with last year."

The 6-3 Gossage, a native of Colorado Springs, Colo., said if you gave up two or three runs with the Sox you had a great chance of losing. The defense, he said, wasn't very good.

Gossage recalled a game against Minnesota in 1976 in which he gave up eight runs in four innings. "Three fly balls fell in the outfield. They got their signals mixed up. Little blunders fell for hits. It was terrible. Paul Richards (Sox manager) said he wouldn't have blamed me if I had walked off the mound, just quit."

Gossage said it wasn't only a bad ballclub, but that owner Bill Veeck's promotions almost drove the players wild.

"I felt that Veeck put the promotions first and the club second," Gossage noted. "Fire engines on the field...teen nights...disc jockeys...animal acts. You couldn't warm up on the field. I believe that people came to see the game. And the field was in terrible shape. The whole season was a nightmare."

If you got the idea that Gossage is thrilled with the December deal that brought him and pitcher Terry Forster to the Pirates for Richie Zisk and Silvio Martinez, you've been reading carefully.

"This team (Pittsburgh) has power, the best pitching staff in either league. And with Chuck Tanner as manager it will keep a good attitude," said Gossage, who played for Tanner at Chicago two years ago.

"To me, being in the National League will be a great challenge," Gossage observed. "The National League is stronger overall. Not that the American League doesn't have good ballplayers. The teams here are stronger. It will be just like when I broke in, learning the hitters."

In 1975, Gossage was the best relief pitcher in baseball, with nine victories and 26 saves. He appeared in 62 games, all in relief, and compiled an ERA of 1.84. He allowed only three homers and 99 hits in 142 innings while striking out 130. He appeared in one inning of the 1975 All-Star game.

"When I heard from Tanner that I had been traded to Pittsburgh, he told me, 'you know where you're going to be.' I said, 'yeh, back in the pen.' That's fine. That's where I'd rather be. I love relief work."

Movie Relives Fatal Struggle

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Joey Cappelletti, the youngest brother of a college football hero, once made a tough New York City sporting audience weep over his fight against a killer disease. Tears fell again Sunday night when a film version of his fatal struggle was given a special screening here at Penn State University, where his brother John earned the Heisman Trophy, college football's highest award.

"Something for Joey" will be shown nationwide April 6 on CBS. "It was like reliving the whole thing," said Mike Cappelletti, Joey's older brother. "As long as people remember him, he's still with us."

Joey died last April 8 at the age of 13. For eight years, he battled leukemia with countless doctors, constant medication and regular stays in the hospital.

John Cappelletti, now a professional running back with the Los Angeles Rams, immortalized Joey at the Heisman dinner in New York in December of 1973.

He had shared the painful days with Joey in their Upper Darby, Pa., home. He had watched Joey bear monthly spinal taps and brave the injustice of having a normal childhood stolen from him.

He shared his admiration in a moving speech that actor Marc Singer repeats in Jerry McNeely's screenplay.

"They say I've shown courage on the football field. But for me, it's only on the field, and only in the fall," John told a startled audience.

"Joey lives with pain all the time. His courage is round-the-clock. I want him to have this trophy. It's more his than mine, because he's been such an inspiration to me," he added.

"If I could dedicate this trophy to him, if it could give him one day of happiness, it would all be worthwhile," the weeping Cappelletti said.

Joey placed the Heisman on a mantle in the family living room next to his other cherished possession, a Little League trophy. "My brother is the best ever," he would say later.

John Cappelletti and his parents did not attend Sunday's screening. The film was shown to them privately at their home.

"It's something I'll never forget," said John Cappelletti's college coach, Joe Paterno, after seeing the scene repeated in the movie.

"We all knew Joey was sick, but we didn't grasp it the way the family did. They were so strong, facing it themselves. I didn't know what it was like until John gave his speech. I had to fight to keep control of myself," said Paterno.

The final poignant touch to the story comes when the actor who portrays Bishop Fulton Sheen walks slowly to the microphone that John Cappelletti used to pour out his love for his brother. Sheen was to give the blessing to close the banquet.

"You do not need a blessing tonight. God has already blessed you in the person of John Cappelletti and his brother Joseph," the bishop said.

NBC Will Take Whole Town To TV Land

By JAY SHARRBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Essex, a tiny town near the Arizona border, has been written up a lot lately, as it's a town of good fortune. It's one of America's last outposts without TV service. Mountains bar TV signals.

And because television cannot get to Essex, NBC is going to bring Essex to television. Friday morning, almost the entire town — 61 residents and two guests — are to board two tour buses dispatched by the network.

They'll be whisked 27 miles west to the NBC works in beautiful downtown Burbank, lodged at a posh hotel nearby, given a special tour of NBC facilities and attend a taping of Friday's "Tonight" show.

That's the word from Mayne Orosz, who works for NBC's promotion department, which is picking up the tab for the voyage and sight-see.

Miss Orosz, who swears on a stack of ratings points this is no publicity gimmick, says the idea of bringing TV-less Essex to television started when an NBC executive in New York read of the town's plight.

He asked her to confer with the townfolk and invite them to see NBC. The notion was brought up at a town meeting, enthusiasm was expressed, invitations immediately sent out and accepted.

Miss Orosz was asked if NBC isn't worried the look at television may cause irreparable damage to the minds of the good citizens of Essex.

"Actually, we're not trying to seduce them," she laughed. "We realize that it may be years before they receive a TV signal or perhaps they never will."

"Our point wasn't to tantalize them with what they don't have, but rather to offer them what might be just a really interesting trip, to see how a network operates, see the facilities and see a show taped."

"Because frankly, they're very happy they don't have television. So our point is: this would be an interesting trip."

Since it's something they're so unfamiliar with.

"And it'd be interesting for us to talk with people who don't have television."

One of the few Essex residents who won't be making the NBC trip — although his wife will — is Walter Smith, 40. He operates a gas station and grocery store in the town, located in the Mojave Desert.

He'd like to go, but says the people who live in and around Essex depend on him to keep his businesses open.

Smith, a polite, soft-spoken man, said in a phone interview he estimates two or three TV sets exist in town and they do occasionally get a TV signal. But not from Los Angeles.

"Once in a while, you'll get a cloudy day and get a skip," he said, meaning a signal that bounces off low clouds. "It usually comes from Texas or the Midwest and fades out after 15-20 minutes."

"He's lived with TV and without it, and says he likes

JAY SHARRBUTT
That's The Word

without better. And he says most Essex residents feel as he does, that "there's better communication between families, more time to do what you want to do."

Still, he doesn't think the NBC trip will do any harm: "It's just kind of a spectacular deal. When you get a chance to see something you haven't seen before, it's, well, like a trip to Disneyland."

At Schools

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Two suburban Detroit school districts face insolvency and a third is headed down the same road, says a lawmaker who wants the state to help bail them out.

The House Appropriations Committee agreed Wednesday to make $750,000 in state loans available to such school districts, payable in five years at 6 per cent interest. The bill goes to the full House.

The Senate last week approved the bill for the insolvent Melvindale School District, but since then the Westwood School District has found itself in the same boat.

By April the North Dearborn Heights district might climb aboard.

The bill as sponsored by Sen. Patrick McCollough, D-Dearborn, set aside $500,000.

Dining In Lavish Manner

WASHINGTON (AP) — The secretary of state takes his lunch on a tray at his desk. The interior secretary sometimes eats in the cafeteria. The transportation secretary has only been to the dining room named for him once.

A survey of the dining habits of President Carter's Cabinet officers indicates most have inherited dining rooms traditionally reserved for them, their top aides and guests.

Some even inherited cooks with their offices. HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. didn't, so he created a $12,783 job for a personal cook. The cook prepares meals for Califano, his undersecretary and VIPs who occasionally join him for working breakfasts or lunches.

"Compared with other executive departments, we are more than austere with a total of two people (the new cook and a hold-over assistant) devoted to meal preparation and serving," a spokesman for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Tuesday. "The salary being paid is in line with what cooks — not chefs, but cooks — receive in this area."

But two Cabinet officers, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus and Patricia Roberts Harris of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, have closed their executive dining rooms and eat either in the employee's cafeteria or outside their departments.

At the Transportation Department, Secretary Brock Adams is entitled by virtue of a $50 annual fee to lunch in what use to be known as the Admiral's Mess, now the Secretary's Dining Room. It is run by the Coast Guard, which brought its original Filipino servants with it when the Coast Guard was shifted from the Treasury Department.

But Adams, a spokesman said, has "de-emphasized the dining room, preferring to order a sandwich at his desk. Except for the secretary's one visit there, the four Coast Guard cooks and stewards have been serving Adams' deputies, assistant secretaries and the administrators of the railroad, highway and aviation administrations.

As Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., is fond of pointing out, the Defense Department has the most private dining rooms and food service personnel of any government agency.

A Defense Department spokesman was ready with the figures Wednesday:

The defense secretary's dining room and kitchen are staffed by one officer part-time, 19 enlisted men full-time and one part-time civilian.

But in addition to Defense Secretary Harold Brown, 117 members of his staff and assistant secretaries of defense lunch in the secretary's dining room where they pay five or 10 cents more per dish than in the department cafeteria.

There are four other executive dining rooms in the Pentagon, one for the joint chiefs of staff and one each for the service secretaries.

The secretary's dining room in the Agriculture Department is open to the public, a department employee reported Wednesday, and Secretary Bob Bergland often eats there.

The Treasury Department has had a cook on its staff for years, to serve the secretary and other senior officials.

Secretary Michael Blumenthal usually has a sandwich at his desk, prepared for him by the $8.24-an-hour career cook, a spokesman said. Other sources in the department said Blumenthal has not been seen in the public cafeteria since reporters and photographers were invited to watch him eat lunch there after he took office.

Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell dines in the attorney general's dining room, served by an $18,000-a-year chief steward and a second cook who is paid $14,000 a year.

SPOKE TOO SOON: Spring is officially here, according to the calendar, but the heavy snow storm which struck the Northeast Tuesday, makes it clear that this optimistic sign in Chinchilla, Pa., near Scranton, was put out a bit too soon. Man Bound Over For Murder Trial

SOUTH HAVEN — Lee Rogers Newman was bound over to Van Buren Circuit court yesterday on two charges stemming from the February shooting in which a South Haven teenager was killed and three other people were wounded.

The decision came in Seventh District court here following a two-day preliminary examination.

Newman, 26, was ordered held without bond by visiting District Court Judge William Buhl, Paw Paw, on charges of the murder of Denise Perry, 17, and assault with intent to commit murder against Obie Franklin, 29, South Haven, one of the three people wounded in the Feb. 24 shooting outside a home in the city's low rent housing project.

Police said the girl was an innocent victim in the case. She was visiting a house when a dispute between two men erupted outside and was shot when she was about to look to see what was happening.

The officers contend a stray bullet fired in the melee went through a wall of the house, killing the girl and wounding another person inside.

"I had to shoot him," two officers testified that Newman told them when they took him into custody. "Obie rushed me."

The testimony was given by officers Robert Dell and Kim Kaikala who took Newman into custody after spotting a car matching the description of one seen leaving the street where the shooting occurred.

Miss Perry was killed inside the home of Bernice Franklin, 40 Cable street. A younger girl, Lavernia Franklin, 12, was wounded by the same bullet, police said.

Joseph Milauckas, Jr., assistant Van Buren county prosecutor, said the charge of assault with intent to murder was filed against Newman because the state intends to show that Miss Perry's death was the result of an intent to kill Franklin. The move was aimed at supporting the murder charge under a transfer of intent law.

Witnesses Tuesday testified that Obie Franklin and Mrs. Ishance Gill, 24, of South Haven, argued inside the home and that shots were fired when Obie Franklin went out of the house at the invitation of Mrs. Gill.

Police also believe that Mrs. Gill was wounded as she sat in a car, from where shots were allegedly fired, parked outside the Cable street home. Mrs. Gill remains hospitalized while Lavernia Franklin and Obie Franklin have been released.

During testimony yesterday, James Clark, Jr., of South Haven, testified that he loaned a 30-06 rifle to Newman "about four or five days prior to the shooting. He said Newman asked for the gun because Newman wanted it around the house for protection." Clark said Newman also told him that he had been "jumped" by Obie Franklin and two others and his neck had been scratched.

The rifle was confiscated after the shooting.

Newman's court-appointed attorney, Kelley Page of Paw Paw, allowed the rifle admitted into evidence without testimony from a ballistics expert of the state police crime lab in Holland. He stipulated to a report which indicated the gun was the one from which the bullet was fired that wounded Lavernia Franklin.

Trooper Dell also testified that while enroute to the South Haven jail with Newman, a police radio broadcast alerted them to watch for a second car that was believed outside the home where the shooting occurred.

Dell said Newman told them that it was the car "he used" and that it was parked in the driveway of Newman's home. Dell said a car was found in the driveway with the rear driver's side window shattered and blood on the front seat and on the outside of the auto.

Another trooper, Gerald Lampan, testified he found three spent 30-06 shell casings in the front seat of the auto. Defense Atty. Page later stipulated reports indicating the casings had been fired from the rifle be allowed into the record without testimony from ballistics experts from the crime lab in Holland.

Of the 12 witnesses who testified during the two-day hearing, none were eyewitnesses to the shooting, although police had questioned a large number of people at the residence when they first arrived on the night of the shooting. Obie Franklin was at the court yesterday, but was not called to testify. Lavernia Franklin, testified on the first day of the hearing.

Business

Break-Ins Reported

SOUTH HAVEN — City police investigated reported break-ins at two businesses yesterday and early today.

Officers said an estimated five to 10 cases of beer were taken from a store from the E&B Saloon, 418 Phoenix street, Tuesday or early Wednesday. Entry was gained by forcing open a door to the store, police said.

Sixteen pairs of shoes and clothing were reported taken from the Northside Grocery, 112 Dyckman avenue, sometime after 8 last night. Entry was gained by breaking a window, police said.

POLICE ROUNDUP

Woman Reports Purse-Snatching

Beverly Herry, 27, of 343 East Empire avenue reported her purse containing $15 cash and a checkbook was snatched Wednesday afternoon while she was walking to a grocery store in the 100 block of East May street, Benton Harbor police said.

Police said the purse-snatcher was described as a teenage male wearing a dark cap and dark blue coat.

Benton Harbor police also said Jackie Sinner, 26, of 818 Pleasant street, St. Joseph, reported the theft of a tape-player and AM/FM radio from her car while it was parked at Sterne Brunson elementary school, 1131 Columbus avenue.

Desegregation Plans On Way

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare is asking for 100 days to prepare desegregation guidelines for six southern states that still maintain dual systems of higher education.

Under a plan outlined by HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. in a letter to a federal judge, the states would be required to produce desegregation plans based on the government guidelines by this fall.

The states involved are Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, Virginia, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

Benton township police said $180 cash and a .32 caliber pistol were reported stolen from the mobile home of Gary Williams, 21, of 465 South Fair avenue, early today. Williams told police he returned home about 12:15 a.m. today and found his home had been burglarized.

Other thefts reported to Benton township police were:

— Two tires and rims and a 24-foot tow chain valued at a total of $180 from Mary's Used Cars, 1358 Territorial road.

— A $120 citizen's band radio owned by Robert Saltzman of from Saltzman's auto while it was parked at Lake Michigan college.

DR. KING ASSASSINATION OFFER

Wife Back's Husband's Story

By BILL HENDRICK
Associated Press Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The wife of a retired Louisville police officer confirmed Wednesday that her husband told Rep. Gene Snyder, R-Ky., that he was offered $500,000 on two occasions to kill Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Mary Baird, 44, said her husband, Clifton, who was out of town and unavailable for comment, told Snyder of an offer he said was made by members of the Louisville Police department and several FBI agents.

She said her husband, 30, retired from the Louisville Police Department several years ago after 27 years service.

"He told me about this when I first married him, seven years ago," Mrs. Baird said. "I think he thought he wasn't going to be believed."

She said she believes one reason he came forward a second time with the allegation was because "he wants to know why someone asked him" to kill the civil rights leader, who was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968.

"It sure has been on his mind," Mrs. Baird said. "He said it just got to bothering him and that's why he contacted Mr. Snyder."

She said her husband, before contacting Snyder, told one of James Earl Ray's attorneys of the alleged plot. She said her husband was "discouraged" after he told the attorney.

Ray is serving 99 years in prison for the slaying of King.

Snyder, who disclosed last week that he had heard from a man who claimed knowledge of a plot to kill King, refused to divulge the man's name.

Mrs. Baird said her husband told her "he was offered $500,000 to kill" King and that "he didn't appreciate it."

"I can't say any more, but he's just not that type of person," she said.

Asked why her husband thought he was asked, Mrs. Baird responded: "That's the $4 question, he wants to know why someone asked him."

She refused to divulge the name of the private security agency for which her husband works but said he was out of town on business unrelated to his allegation of the plot.

"I cannot reveal the name (of the security agency)," she said. "That would reveal everything."

The Kentucky Post first named Baird as the man who reported the alleged plot to Snyder.

Mrs. Baird said she had no idea how her husband was identified as the man who made the allegation but that she was glad it is out in the open now.

"I'm not upset," she said. "It had to come out sooner or later. Somebody leaked it out."

She said her husband "has definitely told me he was the one" who made the statements about the alleged plot.

Snyder said earlier this week he had met the man "face to face" and was convinced he was a "rational" man. In fact, Snyder said he changed his mind about voting to extend financing for the House Select Committee on Assassinations solely because of his conversation with the man.

Snyder said that before he talked with the man, he had voted against continued funding for the committee.

Louisville Police Chief John Nevin said his department had not received any official communications from the congressional committee investigating King's assassination. He said he didn't know Baird very well and that his first reaction was "that it was preposterous."

The $500,000 offer allegedly was made two or three years before King was killed, according to the "informed source" quoted by the Post.

During the years before his death, King was a frequent visitor to Louisville. His brother, the Rev. A. D. Williams King, lived here and was active in the civil rights movement during the 1960s.

Snyder, who still refuses to confirm that Baird is the man who told him of the alleged plot, said he received a letter about the allegation late in February.

According to Snyder, the officer said in the letter that while he was still a policeman he was "innocently involved in a conspiracy to assassinate Martin Luther King."

Earlier this week, Snyder disclosed he had talked with a former policeman, that the policeman had a tape recording of the alleged offer to kill King, and that the officer named names. Snyder refused to disclose the names.

He read the letter, using the word "blank" to disguise identities.

Snyder said he had listened to the tape, that it was almost inaudible, but that he heard enough to decide that the allegation should be investigated by the House committee.

REP. EUGENE SNYDER
Reports Murder Plot

A Funny Thing Happened...

Chairman Meow And Jaws

LONDON (AP) — Herman, a cat, and his rebel commuters arrived a little late for work but convinced that their new charter bus is the way to beat rising rail fares. Herman, sometimes known as "Chairman Meow," is figurehead president of an organization called The Society for the Preservation of Old London Buildings. It has nothing to do with preserving old buildings. The society's aim is to get commuters living in Brighton on the English Channel to and from their jobs in London for less than the minimum $3.19 a day charged by the British railway system. London is 50 miles north of Brighton. Herman, the society's secretary, a parrot named Horace, and its treasurer, a goldfish named Jaws, have their jobs to confuse officials of the state-owned British Rail. British Rail holds a monopoly on the route and could take the society's "officials" to court. "Herman is ready to face them," says Mike Land, chairman of the Brighton Line Commuters' Association and the brains behind Herman, Horace and Jaws. "The rail fares have gone up 60 per cent in the last two years, and some of our members are paying more for traveling than for rent," said Land, a self-employed job consultant.

Your Place Or Mine?

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A surveying error from 1850 means the California-Nevada border zig-zags when it should zag. It could mean that two Nevada casinos are really in California. Gov. Carey, The Troublemaker

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Hugh Carey has gotten himself in trouble with Assemblywoman Mary Goodhue of Westchester. And she says she'll get in trouble at home. In speech last weekend to a group of Democratic party women, the Democrat governor said there were no Republican women in the state legislature. But there is one — Mrs. Goodhue, a lawyer from Mount Kisco. "I'm pleased you want to see more women in the legislature, as I do," she told Carey in letter Tuesday. "But please, governor, don't totally overlook one woman who is already there. Now he reads in the paper that she never got there. What's a poor trusting husband to think?"

House Kills Picketing Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill that would have strengthened the hand of striking construction unions is dead not only for this year but for the foreseeable future, a dejected sponsor says. In a stinging defeat for organized labor and the House Democratic leadership, the common situs picketing bill went down to a surprise defeat Wednesday night on a 217 to 205 vote. Although it directly affected only the building trades, the vote was the first test of organized labor's strength in the new and heavily Democratic Congress. The bill's prime sponsor, Rep. Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J., said the vote killed the legislation for the foreseeable future. He also said the outcome bodes ill for labor's campaign against right-to-work laws. Conservatives and business lobbied intensively against the bill, which would have allowed a union to shut down an entire construction site in a dispute with only one subcontractor.

Stickup Suspect Is Bound Over

Thomas L. Simpson, 19, of 2291 Lawrence drive, Benton township, was ordered bound over to Circuit court yesterday on a charge of armed robbery.

Simpson was bound over by Judge Donald J. Taylor after a preliminary examination in Berrien District court. Simpson was returned to jail in lieu of $25,000 bond.

Lake Twp. Water Plant Bill Paid

The Berrien county board of public works (BPW) yesterday paid the final bill for construction of the first phase of the Lake township water system, although residents of the area won't finish paying off the bonds until 1997.

The board approved payment of $43,113 to Holland Construction Co. of St. Joseph as the last bill for the township's water treatment plant. Other phases of the initial system, including a water tower, intake system and distribution system were previously paid off.

Since the water system was built, Lake township has undertaken an expansion program to bring potable water to most of the township, since the first system served only a small portion of Lake township residents.

Total construction cost for the plant, which has been in operation about six months, according to Robert Barnes, county public works director, was $2,189,099. The township sold $3.5 million worth of bonds to pay for the entire initial system.

The township last July sold $5 million in bonds, to run for 22 years, to expand the water distribution system to bring water and fire protection to 90 per cent of the township. Actual construction cost is $3.4 million for the new system.

State Hikes Rental Charge

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Duty-free stores that sell cutrate liquor to Canada-bound motorists on bridges in Port Huron and Sault Ste. Marie will have to pay much higher rents to the state for the privilege. But they can stay in operation, despite indications late last year that state officials might shut them down. Instead, the state Highway Commission has voted unanimously to boost rents paid by the Can-Am Custom Bonded Warehouse Inc. Can-Am operates shops on the Michigan side of Port Huron's Blue Water Bridge and Sault Ste. Marie's International Bridge. Now, each store pays the state $1,000 a year for 96 square feet of land on the bridge plaza. Small booths stand on the sites, and motorists pick up merchandise there that they earlier paid for in sales offices just off the bridges. But new rents will represent 1½ per cent of their gross profits, the commission said. That will amount to about $12,200 rent for the Port Huron store and $5,900 rent for the Sault Ste. Marie store, said an attorney for Can-Am.

Man Bound Over For Murder Trial

SOUTH HAVEN — Lee Rogers Newman was bound over to Van Buren Circuit court yesterday on two charges stemming from the February shooting in which a South Haven teenager was killed and three other people were wounded.

The decision came in Seventh District court here following a two-day preliminary examination.

Newman, 26, was ordered held without bond by visiting District Court Judge William Buhl, Paw Paw, on charges of the murder of Denise Perry, 17, and assault with intent to commit murder against Obie Franklin, 29, South Haven, one of the three people wounded in the Feb. 24 shooting outside a home in the city's low rent housing project.

Police said the girl was an innocent victim in the case. She was visiting a house when a dispute between two men erupted outside and was shot when she was about to look to see what was happening.

The officers contend a stray bullet fired in the melee went through a wall of the house, killing the girl and wounding another person inside.

"I had to shoot him," two officers testified that Newman told them when they took him into custody. "Obie rushed me."

The testimony was given by officers Robert Dell and Kimmo Kaikala who took Newman into custody after spotting a car matching the description of one seen leaving the street where the shooting occurred.

Miss Perry was killed inside the home of Bernice Franklin, 410 Cable street. A younger girl, Lavernia Franklin, 12, was wounded by the same bullet, police said.

Joseph Milauckas, Jr., assistant Van Buren county prosecutor, said the charge of assault with intent to murder was filed against Newman because the state intends to show that Miss Perry's death was the result of an intent to kill Franklin. The move was aimed at supporting the murder charge under a transfer of intent law.

Witnesses Tuesday testified that Obie Franklin and Mrs. Ishanee Gill, 24, of South Haven, argued inside the home and that shots were fired when Obie Franklin went out of the house at the invitation of Mrs. Gill.

Police also believe that Mrs. Gill was wounded as she sat in a car, from where shots were allegedly fired, parked outside the Cable street home. Mrs. Gill remains hospitalized while Lavernia Franklin and Obie Franklin have been released.

During testimony yesterday, James Clark, Jr., of South Haven, testified that he loaned a 30-06 rifle to Newman "about four or five days prior to the shooting. He said Newman asked for the gun because Newman "wanted it around the house for protection." Clark said Newman also told him that he had been "jumped" by Obie Franklin and two others and his neck had been scratched.

The rifle was confiscated after the shooting.

Newman's court-appointed attorney, Kelley Page of Paw Paw, allowed the rifle admitted into evidence without testimony from a ballistics expert of the state police crime lab in Holland. He stipulated to a report which indicated the gun was the one from which the bullet was fired that wounded Lavernia Franklin.

Trooper Dell also testified that while enroute to the South Haven jail with Newman, a police radio broadcast alerted them to watch for a second car that was believed outside the home where the shooting occurred.

Dell said Newman told them that it was the car "he used" and that it was parked in the driveway of Newman's home. Dell said a car was found in the driveway with the rear driver's side window shattered and blood on the front seat and on the outside of the auto.

Another trooper, Gerald Lampman, testified he found three spent 30-06 shell casings in the front seat of the auto. Defense Atty. Page later stipulated reports indicating the casings had been fired from the rifle be allowed into the record without testimony from ballistics experts from the crime lab in Holland.

Of the 12 witnesses who testified during the two-day hearing, none were eyewitnesses to the shooting, although police had questioned a large number of people at the residence when they first arrived on the night of the shooting. Obie Franklin was at the court yesterday, but was not called to testify. Lavernia Franklin, testified on the first day of the hearing.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The wife of a retired Louisville police officer confirmed Wednesday that her husband told Rep. Gene Snyder, R-Ky., that he was offered $500,000 on two occasions to kill Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Mary Baird, 44, said her husband, Clifton, who was out of town and unavailable for comment, told Snyder of an offer he said was made by members of the Louisville Police department and several FBI agents.

She said her husband, 50, retired from the Louisville Police Department several years ago after 27 years service.

"He told me about this when I first married him, seven years ago," Mrs. Baird said. "I think he thought he wasn't going to be believed."

She said she believes one reason he came forward a second time with the allegation was because "he wants to know why someone asked him" to kill the civil rights leader, who was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968.

"It sure has been on his mind," Mrs. Baird said. "He said it just got to bothering him and that's why he contacted Mr. Snyder."

She said her husband, before contacting Snyder, told one of James Earl Ray's attorneys of the alleged plot. She said her husband was "discouraged" after he told the attorney.

Ray is serving 99 years in prison for the slaying of King. Snyder, who disclosed last week that he had heard from a man who claimed knowledge of a plot to kill King, refused to divulge the man's name.

Mrs. Baird said her husband told her "he was offered $500,000 to kill" King and that "he didn't appreciate it."

"I can't say any more, but he's just not that type of person," she said.

Asked why her husband thought he was asked, Mrs. Baird responded: "That's the $64 question, he wants to know why someone asked him."

She refused to divulge the name of the private security agency for which her husband works but said he was out of town on business unrelated to his allegation of the plot.

"I cannot reveal the name (of the security agency)," she said. "That would reveal everything."

The Kentucky Post first named Baird as the man who reported the alleged plot to Snyder.

Mrs. Baird said she had no idea how her husband was identified as the man who made the allegation but that she was glad it is out in the open now.

"I'm not upset," she said. "It had to come out sooner or later. Somebody leaked it out."

She said her husband "has definitely told me he was the one" who made the statements about the alleged plot.

Snyder said earlier this week he had met the man "face to face" and was convinced he was a "rational" man. In fact, Snyder said he changed his mind about voting to extend financing for the House Select Committee on Assassinations solely because of his conversation with the man.

Snyder said that before he talked with the man, he had voted against continued funding for the committee.

Louisville Police Chief John Nevin said his department had not received any official communications from the congressional committee investigating King's assassination. He said he didn't know Baird very well and that his first reaction was "that it was preposterous."

The $500,000 offer allegedly was made two or three years before King was killed, according to the "informed source" quoted by the Post.

During the years before his death, King was a frequent visitor to Louisville. His brother, the Rev. A. D. Williams King, lived here and was active in the civil rights movement during the 1960s.

Snyder, who still refuses to confirm that Baird is the man who told him of the alleged plot, said he received a letter about the allegation late in February. According to Snyder, the officer said in the letter that while he was still a policeman he was "innocently involved in a conspiracy to assassinate Martin Luther King."

Earlier this week, Snyder disclosed he had talked with a former policeman, that the policeman had a tape recording of the alleged offer to kill King, and that the officer named names. Snyder refused to disclose the names.

He read the letter, using the word "blank" to disguise identities.

Chairman Meow And Jaws

LONDON (AP) — Herman, a cat, and his rebel commuters arrived a little late for work but convinced that their new charter bus is the way to beat rising rail fares. Herman, sometimes known as "Chairman Meow," is figurehead president of an organization called The Society for the Preservation of Old London Buildings. It has nothing to do with preserving old buildings. The society's aim is to get commuters living in Brighton on the English Channel to and from their jobs in London for less than the minimum $3.19 a day charged by the British railway system. London is 50 miles north of Brighton. Herman, the society's secretary, a parrot named Horace, and its treasurer, a goldfish named Jaws, have their jobs to confuse officials of the state-owned British Rail. British Rail holds a monopoly on the route and could take the society's "officials" to court. "Herman is ready to face them," says Mike Land, chairman of the Brighton Line Commuters' Association and the brains behind Herman, Horace and Jaws. "The rail fares have gone up 69 per cent in the last two years, and some of our members are paying more for traveling than for rent," said Land, a self-employed job consultant.

SJ Insurance Man Battles No-Fault Costs

ROY H. LISKEY
SJ agent sees 'faults'

By LARRY MACINTYRE
Staff Writer
Roy H. Liskey, an independent insurance agent in St. Joseph, has joined other $5,000 limit on medical payments to hold down the cost of insurance policies, Liskey said.

At present, Michigan in-

With those prices, the companies are saying they don't care if they write insurance in Michigan or not, Liskey said.

"Rates are going so high that who causes a collision, or his insurance company, pay for the damage he does to other cars.

In their campaign to get the no-fault law changed, Liskey and other independent agents are asking customers to sign a card stating they support the proposed changes. The cards will be sent to the state legislature.

Liskey has also sent letters to President Jimmy Carter and to state Rep. Harry Gast Jr. (R-St. Joseph).

In his letter to Carter, Liskey asked that Carter not move to adopt any national no-fault laws, but rather continue to allow each state to deal with auto insurance as it sees fit.

Liskey received a reply from Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams thanking him for Gast wrote in a reply to Liskey, "I agree with each and every point you make. The pulse I get... is that specific recommendations will be forthcoming.

Thomas C. Jones has been reported to be against all the changes proposed by the independent agents.

independent agents throughout the state in a campaign to get rid of what he claims are the "faults" with Michigan's no-fault auto insurance law.

Liskey said that while the no-fault law is basically a good one, there are provisions of it that he believes are driving the cost of auto insurance sky high and forcing some companies to think about quitting the business in Michigan.

The biggest problem with the law at present, according to Liskey, is that insurance companies must provide unlimited medical coverage.

Liskey said he and other agents are seeking a "reasonable" limit on medical payments. Florida has put a insurance companies must keep paying until the injured person is completely well, no matter how long the person is disabled, Liskey said. One of his customers in Kalamazoo has received over $300,000 in medical payments.

Liskey said the huge medical payments are the main reason the price of auto insurance has increased so rapidly since 1973 when no-fault went into effect.

He said that just in the past two years, one of the major companies he writes has raised its average price for a policy 65 per cent.

Some of the major companies have raised their prices in Michigan by over 100 per cent in the past two years, he added.

a lot of people aren't going to be able to afford car insurance in Michigan," he said. Another problem with the no-fault law, according to Liskey, is that insurance companies must pay for motorcycle accidents even if the insured has only an auto policy.

Liskey and other independent agents want to see the law changed so as to prevent anyone injured on a motorcycle from collecting medical payments under his auto policy if he did not have a motorcycle policy. A person can drive a motorcycle and collect injury payments under his auto policy, Liskey said.

Liskey said he would also like to see the law changed to make the driver

Not everyone in Lansing is on Liskey's side, however. State Insurance Commissioner underwriters' journal. Jones admitted auto policy rates were rising, but he blamed it on the rapidly rising costs of medical care and auto repairs.

Father Who Never Paid Given 90 Days In Jail

A Michigan City man who has not made any weekly support payments for his child since he was ordered to do so in August, 1973, was sentenced this week in Berrien Circuit court to 90 days in jail.

Judge Chester J. Byrns imposed the sentence on Billie W.

White after holding him in contempt of court and placing him on two years probation for $1,840 arrears for one child on ADC.

Byrns ordered that when White gets out of jail he is to sign a wage assignment of $10 weekly support and $10 per week towards the arrearage. Edward Pastrick, chief investigator for the Berrien friend of the court's office, said White has not made a support payment since the order was entered on Aug. 30, 1973.

In other cases before Byrns, Pastrick reported:

Hayes Harris, Jr., of 561 North Winans street, Benton Harbor, got a 20-day jail sentence for $2,099 arrears for one child on ADC, and was also held in contempt and placed on two years probation. Byrns ordered Harris to find a job on his release from jail and pay $10 weekly support and $5 weekly on the arrearage.

The judge added that if any payment is missed Harris is to spend the following weekend in jail. Pastrick said Harris has paid $59.50 in support since the order started in January, 1973.

Robert A. Herman, of 100 Niles avenue, Berrien Springs, was held in contempt and sentenced to two years probation for $1,588 arrears for three children on ADC, and was told to find work in 30 days or spend 30 days in jail. Byrns also told Herman to pay $20 weekly support and $5 per week on the arrears if employment is found.

RETIREES: Mrs. Maxine Chipman has announced her retirement as Paw Paw village clerk. She began working for the village in 1958, and was appointed clerk in 1967, replacing late Nyle Adamson. Village council is expected to act on successor at its meeting Monday.

JAN KIEFER
Salutatorian

BERRIEN SPRINGS — Linda Schinske was named valedictorian and Jan Kiefer salutatorian of the Berrien Springs 1977 senior class at a scholarship achievement banquet at the school last night. The two seniors headed a list of 10 students who are the top-ranking scholars from the class of 103 graduating seniors.

Twenty-seven students, 20 juniors and seven seniors, were also inducted into the Lee F. Auble chapter of the National Honor society during the banquet.

Miss Schinske, 18, maintained a perfect four-point grade average during high school. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Linton Schinske of route 2, box 154, Berrien Springs. Besides being a National Honor society member, her high school activities included two years in band, a year on the yearbook staff and in the pep club, two years in the Spanish club and three years in the varsity club.

Miss Kiefer, 18, maintained a 3.875 grade point average during high school. She is the daughter of Mrs. Della Kiefer of 107 South Kimmel street, and Charles Kiefer, 111 North Cass street, both of Berrien Springs. Also a National Honor society member, her other activities included four years in the band, German club for three years, pep club for a year and two years in the science and math club.

According to the school, the eight other top-scholar seniors, in order of their academic ranking, were: Mindy Fisher, Robert White, Tony Sammons, Laura Ragan, Leath Ann Wurzel, Jeff Spitzer, Steve Taiclet and Sherri Winders.

Pullman Breakfast Saturday

PULLMAN — The Lee township fire department will sponsor a pancake and sausage breakfast Saturday, March 26, from 8 to 10:30 a.m. at the Lee township hall, 56th street, here.

Sinking Cities

(CHICAGO (AP)) — What do Birmingham, Ala., Houston, Tex., and Baton Rouge, La., have in common? They're sinking, because more water is being taken from the ground than nature can replenish, according to water treatment engineers at Ecodyne Corp.

Parks Budget Okayed

BERRIEN SPRINGS — A proposed budget of $36,952 has been approved by the Greater Berrien Springs Parks and Recreation board for 1977-78, according to Jack Davis, program director.

"The whole budget is conditional," he said. "If we don't receive the increased subsidies we requested, we will have to cut programs," he said.

Subsidies requested this year are $7,700 from Oronoko township, $4,300 from Berrien township and $5,800 from Berrien Springs village, for a total of $17,800. Other income sources are $1,200 from civic donations, $4,100 from CETA, $7,230 from self-supporting sports and leisure program activities, and $6,622 from registration fees, concession stand income and miscellaneous sources.

Expected expenditures outlined in the proposed budget are: $16,872 for administrative costs including a $10,800 director's salary; adult sports, rocket football, six children's baseball leagues, summer playground program, and tennis tournament, $7,980; the 24-activity leisure program, $1,200; summer recreation program for mentally and emotionally impaired adults, $200; shuffleboard court construction, $1,000; operation and maintenance of Camp Bletz, $1,000; proposed lighting for ballfields, ice skating rink construction, and purchase of a concession stand trailer, $3,800; general facility improvements, $1,500; establishment of a community theatre, $400; and $3,000 for development of Pardee island in the St. Joseph river as a park.

Dowagiac's Hospital Chief Takes New Post

DOWAGIAC — Thomas S. Dube, administrator at Lee Memorial hospital here, is resigning to accept an administrative position with a hospital in Saudi Arabia, according to George Watkins, chairman of the hospital's board of trustees.

Dube has been administrator at Lee since August, 1972. He will begin his new position April 15 at one of three hospitals in Saudi Arabia operated by the Whittaker Corp., Los Angeles, Calif., under contract to the

Saudi Arabia Ministry of defense and aviation. The hospitals are located on ministry bases and will be primarily military personnel and their dependents.

Dube's resignation was accepted by the board at a meeting at the hospital Tuesday night.

Dube told the board that with construction underway on a more than $6 million hospital expansion program, "I feel I can now move on and accept a really exciting new opportunity in a most interesting part of the world."

He said when he accepted the job as Lee administrator it was a challenge because the hospital was conditionally licensed and in danger of closing if deficiencies were not corrected. He said that community backing for a $750,000 building fund drive and the search for additional construction financing brought the hospital "out of the woods."

Dube is a retired U.S. Army lieutenant colonel with 27 years of service at military medical care facilities in many parts of the world.

Watkins said a search for a new administrator is underway and an acting administrator will serve if necessary until a new appointment is made.

Farmer Accused Of Arson

By TOM RENNER
South Haven Correspondent

SOUTH HAVEN — A Genesee township farmer was arrested by state police here yesterday on a charge of arson.

The charge stemmed from a Jan. 14 fire which caused an estimated $62,000 damage to the farmer's barn and machinery inside the structure.

Police said Edward Gumpert,

21, route 1, Grand Junction, was ordered to appear in Seventh District court on a charge of arson to read property.

Troopers said they have been investigating the fire which destroyed a barn of the Gumpert farm on 39th street north of CR-388 on the basis of a complaint from the Westfield Insurance Co. of Grand Rapids which held policies totaling

The insurance company said Gumpert had reportedly been experiencing financial problems and had some farm equipment repossessed a day before the fire. Other equipment was to be repossessed the next day.

Troopers said Gumpert was arrested following a polygraph interview yesterday.

Niles Man Kills Wife, Self

South Berrien Bureau

NILES — City police here said a Niles man who left a note saying he didn't want to see his ill wife suffer, apparently shot and killed her and then took his own life late yesterday morning.

Police identified the couple as Frieda Bryan, 74, and her 77-year-old husband, Russell, both of 1303 Howard street.

Dr. John Bruhl, a deputy Berrien county medical examiner, has ruled the deaths a murder and suicide, according to Max Cole, Niles patrolman.

Cole said that the man and wife both suffered single gunshot wounds in the head, and a .32 caliber automatic pistol believed used was found by police in the house.

A note in Bryan's handwriting found in the kitchen where his body was discovered on the floor, said his wife was ill and he did not want to see her suffer, Cole said.

The weapon was found on the floor, near the husband's body, police said.

Cole said time of death was estimated at between 10:30 and 11 a.m. yesterday.

Mrs. Ann Latson, Niles, a worker in the Meals on Wheels program for the elderly, discovered the bodies about noon, police said.

Mrs. Latson told police she had known the couple for over a year and that Mrs. Bryan was left speechless by a stroke. Cole said police also learned that Bryan was scheduled for surgery and was depressed over his wife being forced to move to a nursing home.

Police said Mrs. Bryan suffered a wound in the rear of the head while she was sitting in a living room chair, Cole said.

SJ Insurance Man Battles No-Fault Costs

independent agents throughout the state in a campaign to get rid of what he claims are the "faults" with Michigan's no-fault auto insurance law.

Liskey said that while the no-fault law is basically a good one, there are provisions of it that he believes are driving the cost of auto insurance sky high and forcing some companies to think about quitting the business in Michigan.

The biggest problem with the law at present, according to Liskey, is that insurance companies must provide unlimited medical coverage.

Liskey said he and other agents are seeking a "reasonable" limit on medical payments. Florida has put a insurance companies must keep paying until the injured person is completely well, no matter how long the person is disabled, Liskey said. One of his customers in Kalamazoo has received over $300,000 in medical payments.

Liskey said the huge medical payments are the main reason the price of auto insurance has increased so rapidly since 1973 when no-fault went into effect.

He said that just in the past two years, one of the major companies he writes has raised its average price for a policy 65 per cent.

Some of the major companies have raised their prices in Michigan by over 100 per cent in the past two years, he added.

a lot of people aren't going to be able to afford car insurance in Michigan," he said. Another problem with the no-fault law, according to Liskey, is that insurance companies must pay for motorcycle accidents even if the insured has only an auto policy.

Liskey and other independent agents want to see the law changed so as to prevent anyone injured on a motorcycle from collecting medical payments under his auto policy if he did not have a motorcycle policy. A person can drive a motorcycle and collect injury payments under his auto policy, Liskey said.

Liskey said he would also like to see the law changed to make the driver

In his letter to Gast, Liskey urged him to help in getting the proposed changes to the state law adopted.

Boy Won't Be Charged In Bus Shooting Death

KALAMAZOO — The Kalamazoo sheriff's department detective bureau said today no charges will be filed against a nine-year-old schoolboy who fired a gun on a Kalamazoo public schools bus Tuesday. The shot killed 12-year-old Tammy Lou Kersten in a seat across the aisle.

The boy, whose name was withheld, had taken the gun from home to school for show-and-tell without the knowledge of his family or teachers.

Tammy, a seventh grader at St. Augustine elementary school, will be buried Friday after funeral services to be held at 1 p.m. at the First Presbyterian church in Kalamazoo.

The girl had attended St. Augustine four years and was a member of the junior high school girls' basketball team. She also was a member of the school band and of the Service club.

There were some 30 to 35 students on the bus at about 3:20 p.m. when the shooting occurred, according to sheriff's department detectives, who said after investigation the incident was entirely accidental. The bus was within four blocks of Tammy's home.

Bus Driver Edward Jones, 23, told police he suddenly heard a shot behind him in the bus and stopped immediately. He said he took a revolver from the nine-year-old boy, and then rushed to a nearby home to call the sheriff's department and an ambulance. He then returned to the bus and ushered the other children off. Tammy, taken to Bronson hospital in an ambulance, was pronounced dead at 3:55 p.m. Detectives reported examination at the hospital showed the bullet had struck the girl's heart. The boy is a fourth grader at North Christian school, according to Assistant Principal Tony Ahlers.

"No one here at the school was aware that the gun was on the premises," Ahlers said yesterday. "In fact, we don't know today if it was."

Detectives said the revolver was an older model weapon that had been in the boy's family several years. They learned that the boy had taken it without his parents' permission or knowledge.

The boy told officers he intended to exhibit the gun during a show-and-tell period, but instead put it in his desk drawer and did not get it out in any classes at school.

Tom Smith, transportation supervisor for Kalamazoo public schools, said there was no actual policy against guns on buses, but that "no way would a driver let a kid get on a bus if he knew the child had a gun."

Sister Elizabeth Ann, SSJ, principal at St. Augustine elementary school, said classes were held Wednesday, but that the entire school was "so upset." She said she told the students, "We must remember the members of both families; the family that suffered the loss and the family that now must live with the tragedy."

Father Who Never Paid Given 90 Days In Jail

A Michigan City man who has not made any weekly support payments for his child since he was ordered to do so in August, 1973, was sentenced this week in Berrien Circuit court to 90 days in jail.

Judge Chester J. Byrns imposed the sentence on Billie W.

White after holding him in contempt of court and placing him on two years probation for $1,840 arrears for one child on ADC.

Byrns ordered that when White gets out of jail he is to sign a wage assignment of $10 weekly support and $10 per week towards the arrearage. Edward Pastrick, chief investigator for the Berrien friend of the court's office, said White has not made a support payment since the order was entered on Aug. 30, 1973.

In other cases before Byrns, Pastrick reported:

Hayes Harris, Jr., of 561 North Winans street, Benton Harbor, got a 20-day jail sentence for $2,099 arrears for one child on ADC, and was also held in contempt and placed on two years probation. Byrns ordered Harris to find a job on his release from jail and pay $10 weekly support and $5 weekly on the arrearage.

The judge added that if any payment is missed Harris is to spend the following weekend in jail. Pastrick said Harris has paid $59.50 in support since the order started in January, 1973.

Robert A. Herman, of 100 Niles avenue, Berrien Springs, was held in contempt and sentenced to two years probation for $1,588 arrears for three children on ADC, and was told to find work in 30 days or spend 30 days in jail. Byrns also told Herman to pay $20 weekly support and $5 per week on the arrears if employment is found.

RETIREES: Mrs. Maxine Chipman has announced her retirement as Paw Paw village clerk. She began working for the village in 1958, and was appointed clerk in 1967, replacing late Nyle Adamson. Village council is expected to act on successor at its meeting Monday.

Farmer Accused Of Arson

South Haven Correspondent

SOUTH HAVEN — A Geneva township farmer was arrested by state police here yesterday on a charge of arson.

The charge stemmed from a Jan. 14 fire which caused an estimated $62,000 damage to the farmer's barn and machinery inside the structure.
Police said Edward Gumpert,

21, route 1, Grand Junction, was ordered to appear in Seventh District court on a charge of arson to court real property.

Troopers said they have been investigating the fire which destroyed a barn of the Gumpert farm on 59th street north of CR-388 on the basis of a complaint from the Westfield Insurance Co. of Grand Rapids which held policies totaling $102,000 on the building and equipment.

The insurance company said Gumpert had reportedly been experiencing financial problems and had some farm equipment repossessed a day before the fire. Other equipment was to be repossessed the next day.

Troopers said Gumpert was arrested following a polygraph interview yesterday.

Parks Budget Okayed

BERRIEN SPRINGS — A proposed budget of $36,952 has been approved by the Greater Berrien Springs Parks and Recreation board for 1977-78, according to Jack Davis, program director.

"The whole budget is conditional," he said. "If we don't receive the increased subsidies we requested, we will have to cut programs," he said.

Subsidies requested this year are $7,700 from Oronoko township, $4,300 from Berrien township and $5,800 from Berrien Springs village, for a total of $17,800. Other income sources are $1,200 from civic donations, $4,100 from CETA, $7,230 from self-supporting sports and leisure program activities, and $6,622 from registration fees, concession stand income and miscellaneous sources.

Expected expenditures outlined in the proposed budget are: $16,872 for administrative costs including a $10,800 director's salary; adult sports, rocket football, six children's baseball leagues, summer playground program, and tennis tournament, $7,980; the 24-activity leisure program, $1,200; summer recreation program for mentally and emotionally impaired adults, $200; shuffleboard court construction, $1,000; operation and maintenance of Camp Betz, $1,000; proposed lighting for ballfields, ice skating rink construction, and purchase of a concession stand trailer, $3,800; general facility improvements, $1,500; establishment of a community theatre, $400; and $3,000 for development of Pardee island in the St. Joseph river as a park.

Dowagiac's Hospital Chief Takes New Post

DOWAGIAC — Thomas S. Dube, administrator at Lee Memorial hospital here, is resigning to accept an administrative position with a hospital in Saudi Arabia, according to George Watkins, chairman of the hospital's board of trustees.

Dube has been administrator at Lee since August, 1972. He will begin his new position April 15 at one of three hospitals in Saudi Arabia operated by the Whitaker Corp., Los Angeles, Calif., under contract to the

Dube's resignation was accepted by the board at a meeting at the hospital Tuesday night. Dube told the board that with construction underway on a more than $6 million hospital expansion program, "I feel I can now move on and accept a really exciting new opportunity in a most interesting part of the world."

He said when he accepted the job as Lee administrator it was a challenge because the hospital was conditionally licensed and in danger of closing if deficiencies were not corrected. He said that community backing for a $750,000 building fund drive and the search for additional construction financing brought the hospital "out of the woods."

Dube is a retired U.S. Army lieutenant colonel with 27 years of service at military medical care facilities in many parts of the world.

Watkins said a search for a new administrator is underway and an acting administrator will serve if necessary until a new appointment is made.

Niles Man Kills Wife, Self

South Berrien Bureau

NILES — City police here said a Niles man who left a note saying he didn't want to see his ill wife suffer, apparently shot and killed her and then took his own life late yesterday morning.

Police identified the couple as Frieda Bryan, 74, and her 77-year-old husband, Russell, both of 1303 Howard street.

Dr. John Bruni, a deputy Berrien county medical examiner, has ruled the deaths a murder and suicide, according to Max Cole, Niles patrolman.

Cole said that the man and wife both suffered single gunshot wounds in the head, and a .32 caliber automatic pistol believed used was found by police in the house.

A note in Bryan's handwriting found in the kitchen where his body was discovered on the floor, said his wife was ill and he did not want to see her suffer, Cole said.

The weapon was found on the floor, near the husband's body, police said.

Cole said time of death was estimated at between 10:30 and 11 a.m. yesterday.

Mrs. Ann Latson, Niles, a worker in the Meals on Wheels program for the elderly, discovered the bodies about noon, police said.

Mrs. Latson told police she had known the couple for over a year and that Mrs. Bryan was left speechless by a stroke. Cole said police also learned that Bryan was scheduled for surgery and was depressed over his wife being forced to move to a nursing home.

Police said Mrs. Bryan suffered a wound in the rear of the head while she was sitting in a living room chair, Cole said.

Her husband's wound was to his right temple, police said.

Burroughs Successor Is Named

DETROIT (AP) — Burroughs Corp. Chairman Ray Macdonald says President Paul Mirabito is his choice to replace him as chief executive officer in December.

Macdonald will step aside at the end of the year because of a retirement that the chief executive officer retire at 65.

No official announcements were made Wednesday at the company's annual meeting, but Macdonald told shareholders that Mirabito "will chair next year's annual meeting."

Macdonald refused to elaborate at a news conference later. But he said Mirabito will be the chief executive officer, "and the chief executive officer by any other name is still the CEO."

Macdonald said deliveries of the company's new 800 series computer systems will accelerate this year.

Mirabito told shareholders that 1977 capital spending is likely to be $310 million, compared with $276 million last year.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Why Preferreds? Why Not Bonds?

By SAM SHULSKY
Q. I don't understand recommending preferreds. A preferred paying $4.50 can sell for only little more than half its par value ($100) in view of going interest rates. I bought preferreds 30 years ago and even if I held them at infinity there isn't much chance I will get par. Why not bonds?

A. There's no quarrel with your facts... except to point out that I didn't recommend preferreds 30 years ago. I have mentioned them in recent years because yields have been good, considering quality and dividend coverage, and also because small investors can buy them in small lots — which is not the case too often with bonds.

I grant you that a good bond, held to maturity, will pay out at par. But if one considers that both these income-type securities are bought primarily for retirement income, a 30-year wait is pretty academic. However — on principle you are correct.

Q. We are a retired couple, in our 70s, who have just sold our home for $18,000 and have moved to an apartment. It has been suggested that we put the $18,000 into 7 1/2 per cent certificates of deposit, thus keeping the capital intact — or, add $2,000 from savings and buy a joint annuity which would pay us $2,200 annually with any residue going to our estate. Have you other alternatives?

A. I think you've covered it pretty well. A savings certificate yielding 7 1/2 per cent is pretty near the best you can get today with that much security. Considering the two plans (and assuming you would add the $2,000 to the $18,000 at 7 1/2 per cent the certificate income would come to $1,550 a year — with capital untouched.

The joint "refund type" annuity would yield $2,200. If you didn't live nine years more, your heirs would get the balance of the $20,000 not paid out. If you lived longer, you would still continue to get the $2,200 a year.

Both plans would be "comfortable" in that there would be no question of not getting the stated return or of running out of capital. I supposed an argument could be made for putting the money into 8-8 1/4 per cent preferred stocks and then selling off some of the shares each year in order to boost your income from $1,600 to $2,200 — but that could prove worrisome, especially if the market goes against you.

One vote for the joint annuity... and let your heirs take the risk.

Q. I am 72, retired, don't owe a quarter to anyone. This is how I stand, financially: $60,000 in 5 1/2 per cent savings; $200,000 in certificates of deposit; 600 shares of A.T.&T., 100 RCA and 250 British Petroleum — and that's it. What am I doing wrong?

A. You're making a gift of $1,000 to $1,200 a year to some savings banks with those $60,000 deposits. You're paying Uncle Sam more income taxes than necessary. Otherwise, it's OK with me.

Q. I bought some shares in 1967 which today are yielding 8 per cent on that original cost. Or should I figure the yield on today's market?

A. Depends on whether you want to still be living in 1967 or managing your investments in today's market. It seems to me the only way one can tell whether he is using his money most efficiently for current needs is to use current figures.

U.S. Sues To Close Oil Lease Firm

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The federal government filed suit Wednesday to stop the operations of L & S Petroleum Co., accusing the firm of not registering with the U.S. Securities & Exchange Commission.

One of those named in the suit was a Grand Rapids, Mich., accountant.

The suit also accused the firm of distributing false and misleading information to potential investors since about November 1974, and of mishandling funds.

Named in the suit were Thomas A. Laumann, president and principle stockholder of the company; Peter R. Maupin of Universal City, Tex.; Kenneth G. Hungerford II, an accountant in Grand Rapids, Mich., and Courtland Rand Michaels, Hartsville, Ohio.

Maupin, Hungerford and Michaels solicited customers for the company on a commission basis from November 1974 to November 1975, the suit said.

Laumann sells oil and gas lease interests in Oklahoma under a firm name of Public Enterprises Inc., Oklahoma City, the suit said.

This is despite a permanent injunction from dealing in securities lodged against him in Texas in June 1972, and an indictment for securities fraud in Canada in 1970.

Maupin has been selling interests in Texas oil and gas wells under the name of Bar M Petroleum Co. in San Antonio since leaving Laumann in 1975, the suit said.

Michaels and Hungerford are shown as raising capital through unregulated joint venture programs in Ohio.

The suit maintains that in October 1975, Michaels visited the Oklahoma City office of L & S, ascertained that Laumann was misleading investors and withdrew $177,000 in escrow funds which he refunded to investors.

In August 1976, Laumann filed charges of embezzlement against Michaels and Hungerford for the $177,000, the suit said.

Laumann could not be reached for comment Wednesday night.

Chrysler Prices Announced

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s new luxury compacts, the Dodge Diplomat and Chrysler LeBaron, will have base prices ranging from $4,943 to $5,594, the No. 3 automaker announced Wednesday.

Automatic transmission, power steering, power brakes and Chrysler's electronic "leanburn" engine system are standard on the new models, Chrysler said.

Each of the models is available in two- or four-door coupes and sedans.

The prices compare with a base of $3,570 for the automaker's lowest-priced compact, the Plymouth Volare.

Satra's Trading Success

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Who is Satra?

Earlier this year a company named Satra announced it had obtained television rights to the Moscow Olympics in 1980, challenging the media to find a quick answer to the question.

Since then the company apparently has lost the TV rights to National Broadcasting Co., against whom it has filed a $275 million suit, companion to another $275 million suit against the International Olympic Committee.

That nobody could quickly describe Satra is in the nature of things, because Satra is a trading corporation, which is its founder, Ara Oztemel, describes as "a company that explores needs and then goes out and finds a supply."

As such, Satra does not have the ready identification of smaller companies that have their names imprinted on trucks and real estate and advertisements. Satra does have some of these, but its main occupation is trading.

It conducts a huge amount of commerce with the Soviet Union and has since the very early 1950s, when Oztemel, an American born in Turkey, began importing chrome ore. The company is now the biggest U.S. chrome importer.

But Satra has grown far beyond the business of chrome mining and importing. It also imports other minerals, metals and alloys. It sells U.S. automotive steel to the Soviets. It imports exports for its own account and for others.

It holds exclusive rights to distribute Soviet motorcycles, motorcycles, bicycles, farm equipment and certain industrial machinery in West Germany, the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States.

Beginning next year it will sell and service the Lada, a sturdy Fiat-like car here, and hopes to develop sales of 50,000 to 60,000 units a year.

Ara Oztemel, 50, and a few associates own almost all of Satra.

He left Turkey in 1944 after his father died without a will, permitting the state to claim the estate. He worked here for the War Shipping Administration.

After the war he studied engineering at Northeastern University, graduating in 1949 but remaining in graduate school until 1951. After working as an engineer for Stone & Webster and Polaroid, Oztemel sought sources of chrome in Turkey and the Soviet Union.

As he explains it, "Satra was the first company to establish meaningful postwar trade relations with Eastern European countries, and is one of a limited number of companies accredited by the Soviet government to maintain offices in Moscow."

One thing led to another, as it always does for the successful trader. A good trader instinctively is on the alert for solving needs by bringing the supply together with the demand. When he is effective, the trader takes a cut.

A trader is a problem-solver, an adventurer, an opportunist, an exploiter, a diplomat, an acquirer of whatever skills and knowledge are needed to be effective. Oztemel, who spends 50 per cent of his time abroad, is effective.

"We calculate that since the beginning, on our own account, we purchased something more than $1 billion from the Soviet Union," he said in an interview. "We figure we have shipped for our own account and for others $500 million." Sales last year were about $150 million.

Oztemel and his key associates have done all this without meaningful public financing. A pleasant, round-faced, outwardly relaxed cigar-smoker, he jokes that he is rich but has no money because of "perpetual reinvestment."

He once considered seeking public money but maintains Wall Street just doesn't accept trading companies. "They think there's no management, no roots, no plants, and that they're run usually by an immigrant."

Wall Street, he suggested, likes something more tangible, like real estate, for example, forgetting that it too is but a trading industry that has assumed establishment credentials.

Trading companies are common in other nations, but not here. "Europe understands them and Japan is fully sophisticated," said Oztemel. "But we don't have an understanding."

We must change, he said, if we are to trade effectively.

CONSUMER BANKING SAFEGUARDS URGED

At the start of '77, a money dispensing machine affixed to a Washington, D.C., bank went on the blink and dispensed free money to customers seeking withdrawals from their accounts. The money-matic machine registered the customers, account numbers but not the totals of cash they withdrew.

While most of the bank's customers responded to an inquiry and reported the totals they had withdrawn, not all did so. Some couldn't recall how much money they had taken; others merely refused to reply.

Who is liable for the error? The customer or the bank?

The answer to that puzzle isn't clear now, but it would be if the advice of National Commission on Electronic Fund Transfers is accepted. For in a recently released interim report, the 26-member commission recommends: "The depository institution should be liable for erroneous, unauthorized or fraudulent use of the account," unless it can prove fraud or negligence on the customer's part.

Despite the angry criticism by financial institutions across the nation of a recent column in which I pleaded for consumer safeguards against the risks inherent in electronic fund transfer systems, the National Commission finally has also concluded that consumer safeguards are indeed imperative.

It has forwarded its concerns and suggestions to relevant banking committees in Congress and is urging Congress to act quickly to protect EFT customers.

It was in 1974 that Congress established the commission to determine the role government regulation should place in computerized money handling.

But President Ford dragged his feet on making the necessary appointments and the staff didn't get to work until May 1976 — long after the market was being flooded by a host of computerized financial services, money dispensing machines, etc.

Many states have tried to deal with EFT questions by regulatory laws or by outlawing EFT altogether. Meanwhile, the financial industry has been arguing in and out of court whether or not EFT terminals constitute bank branches, who should have access to them, what services the machines should be allowed to provide.

Fears have multiplied about the consumer's rights and responsibilities under EFT, invasion of privacy, computer theft and computer error. Concern has mounted about loss of the "float" (the time it takes for a check to clear), the inability to stop payment under EFT, the customer's lack of proof of payment, etc.

After a few months of hearings, the commission upgraded these concerns to high priority and in its first of two reports acknowledged that offsetting the advantages of EFT are the potentials for abuse. (Its second and final report is due in October 1977.) Among the commission's recommendations:

Congress should pass legislation giving citizens the right to contest government access to their financial records and to receive prior notice that their records have been subpoenaed. Also, private third parties should not be allowed to get information from anyone's account without his or her approval, except to verify the existence of the account or complete transactions.

Any EFT system should provide us with records or our transactions which can be used as cancelled checks — for record keeping, disputes with merchants, IRS discussions, the like.

While the "float" should not be mandatory, other means of providing for deferred payment should be offered as "a marketable and attractive service option." Under one method, called "value dating," you would specify the future date when actual payment will take place as distinct from the date of the transaction itself. This would be subject to the seller's or creditor's agreement.

You, the customer, should be told in writing of your rights and responsibilities under EFT at the time you open an account.

The commission did not endorse any substitute for stop-payment privileges associated with checks — on the basis that it's not of major importance or a significant protection. Credit cards and checks — customary methods of payment — will not be wiped out by EFT, the commission emphasized. Rather, the new system will expand payment choices. The commission's report should slow down the bulldozer of EFT — giving us time to perfect the system and its protections. Score a big one for the consumer!

DETROIT (AP) — Burroughs Corp. Chairman Ray Macdonald says President Paul Mirabito is his choice to replace him as chief executive officer in December.

Macdonald will step aside at the end of the year because of a retirement that the chief executive officer retire at 65.

No official announcements were made Wednesday at the company's annual meeting, but Macdonald told shareholders that Mirabito "will chair next year's annual meeting."

Macdonald refused to elaborate at a news conference later. But he said Mirabito will be the chief executive officer, "and the chief executive officer by any other name is still the CEO."

Macdonald said deliveries of the company's new 800 series computer systems will accelerate this year.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Why Preferreds? Why Not Bonds?

By SAM SHULSKY
Q. I don't understand recommending preferreds. A preferred paying $4.50 can sell for only little more than half its par value ($100) in view of going interest rates. I bought preferreds 30 years ago and even if I held them ad infinitum there isn't much chance I will get par. Why not bonds?

A. There's no quarreling with your facts... except to point out that I didn't recommend preferreds 30 years ago. I have mentioned them in recent years because yields have been good, considering quality and dividend coverage, and also because small investors can buy them in small lots — which is not the case too often with bonds.

I grant you that a good bond, held to maturity, will pay out at par. But if one considers that both these income-type securities are bought primarily for retirement income, a 30-year wait is pretty academic. However — on principle you are correct.

Q. We are a retired couple, in our 70s, who have just sold our home for $18,000 and have moved to an apartment. It has been suggested that we put the $18,000 into 7 1/2 per cent certificates of deposit, thus keeping the capital intact — or, add $2,000 from savings and buy a joint annuity which would pay us $2,200 annually with any residue going to our estate. Have you other alternatives?

A. I think you've covered it pretty well. A savings certificate yielding 7 1/2 per cent is pretty near the best you can get today with that much security.

Considering the two plans (and assuming you would add the $2,200 to the $18,000 at 7 1/2 per cent the certificate income would come to $1,550 a year — with capital untouched.

The joint "refund type" annuity would yield $2,200. If you didn't live nine years more, your heirs would get the balance of the $20,000 not paid out. If you lived longer, you would still continue to get the $2,200 a year.

Both plans would be "comfortable" in that there would be no question of not getting the stated return or of running out of capital. I supposed an argument could be made for putting the money into 8-8 1/2 per cent preferred stocks and then selling off some of the shares each year in order to boost your income from $1,600 to $2,200 — but that could prove worrisome, especially if the market goes against you.

One vote for the joint annuity... and let your heirs take the risk.

Q. I am 72, retired, don't owe a quarter to anyone. This is how I stand, financially: $60,000 in 5 1/2 per cent savings; $200,000 in certificates of deposit, 600 shares of A.T.&T., 100 RCA and 250 British Petroleum — and that's it. What am I doing wrong?

A. You're making a gift of $1,000 to $1,200 a year to some savings banks with those $60,000 deposits. You're paying Uncle Sam more income taxes than necessary. Otherwise, it's OK with me.

Q. I bought some shares in 1967 which today are yielding 8 per cent on that original cost. Or should I figure the yield on today's market?

A. Depends on whether you want to still be living in 1967 or managing your investments in today's market. It seems to me the only way one can tell whether he is using his money most efficiently for current needs is to use current figures.

U.S. Sues To Close Oil Lease Firm

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The federal government filed suit Wednesday to stop the operations of L & S Petroleum Co., accusing the firm of not registering with the U.S. Securities & Exchange Commission.

One of those named in the suit was a Grand Rapids, Mich., accountant.

The suit also accused the firm of distributing false and misleading information to potential investors since about November 1974, and of mishandling funds.

Named in the suit were Thomas A. Laumann, president and principle stockholder of the company; Peter R. Maupin of Universal City, Tex.; Kenneth G. Hungerford II, an accountant in Grand Rapids, Mich., and Courtland Rand Michaels, Hartsville, Ohio.

Maupin, Hungerford and Michaels solicited customers for the company on a commission basis from November 1974 to November 1975, the suit said. Laumann sells oil and gas lease interests in Oklahoma under a firm name of Public Enterprises Inc., Oklahoma City, the suit said.

This is despite a permanent injunction from dealing in securities lodged against him in Texas in June 1972, and an indictment for securities fraud in Canada in 1970.

Maupin has been selling interests in Texas oil and gas wells under the name of Bar M Petroleum Co. in San Antonio since leaving Laumann in 1975, the suit said.

Michaels and Hungerford are shown as raising capital through unregulated joint venture programs in Ohio.

The suit maintains that in October 1975, Michaels visited the Oklahoma City office of L & S, ascertained that Laumann was misleading investors and withdrew $177,000 in escrow funds which he refunded to investors.

In August 1976, Laumann filed charges of embezzlement against Michaels and Hungerford for the $177,000, the suit said.

Laumann could not be reached for comment Wednesday night.

Chrysler Prices Announced

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s new luxury compacts, the Dodge Diplomat and Chrysler LeBaron, will have base prices ranging from $4,943 to $5,594, the No. 3 automaker announced Wednesday.

Automatic transmission, power steering, power brakes and Chrysler's electronic "leanburn" engine system are standard on the new models, Chrysler said.

Each of the models is available in two- or four-door coupes and sedans.

The prices compare with a base of $3,570 for the automaker's lowest-priced compact, the Plymouth Volare.

Satra's Trading Success

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Who is Satra?

Earlier this year a company named Satra announced it had obtained television rights to the Moscow Olympics in 1980, challenging the media to find a quick answer to the question.

Since then the company apparently has lost the TV rights to National Broadcasting Co., against whom it has filed a $275 million suit, companion to another $275 million suit against the International Olympic Committee.

That nobody could quickly describe Satra is in the nature of things, because Satra is a trading corporation, which its founder, Ara Oztemel, describes as "a company that explores needs and then goes out and finds a supply."

As such, Satra does not have the ready identification of smaller companies that have their names imprinted on trucks and real estate and advertisements. Satra does have some of these, but its main occupation is trading.

It conducts a huge amount of commerce with the Soviet Union and has since the very early 1950s, when Oztemel, an American born in Turkey, began importing chrome ore. The company is now the biggest U.S. chrome importer.

But Satra has grown far beyond the business of chrome mining and importing. It also imports other minerals, metals and alloys. It sells U.S. automotive steel to the Soviets. It imports exports for its own account and for others.

It holds exclusive rights to distribute Soviet motorcycles, motorcycles, bicycles, farm equipment and certain industrial machinery in West Germany, the United Kingdom, Canada and the United States.

Beginning next year it will sell and service the Lada, a sturdy Fiat-like car here, and hopes to develop sales of 50,000 to 60,000 units a year.

Ara Oztemel, 50, and a few associates own almost all of Satra.

He left Turkey in 1944 after his father died without a will, permitting the state to claim the estate. He worked here for the War Shipping Administration.

After the war he studied engineering at Northeastern University, graduating in 1949 but remaining in graduate school until 1951. After working as an engineer for Stone & Webster and Polaroid, Oztemel sought sources of chrome in Turkey and the Soviet Union.

As he explains it, "Satra was the first company to establish meaningful postwar trade relations with Eastern European countries, and is one of a limited number of companies accredited by the Soviet government to maintain offices in Moscow."

One thing led to another, as it always does for the successful trader. A good trader instinctively is on the alert for solving needs by bringing the supply together with the demand. When he is effective, the trader takes a cut.

A trader is a problem-solver, an adventurer, an opportunist, an exploiter, a diplomat, an acquirer of whatever skills and knowledge are needed to be effective. Oztemel, who spends 50 per cent of his time abroad, is effective.

"We calculate that since the beginning, on our own account, we purchased something more than $1 billion from the Soviet Union," he said in an interview. "We figure we have shipped for our own account and for others $500 million." Sales last year were about $150 million.

He once considered seeking public money but maintains Wall Street just doesn't accept trading companies. "They think there's no management, no roots, no plants, and that they're run usually by an immigrant."

Wall Street, he suggested, likes something more tangible, like real estate, for example, forgetting that it too is but a trading industry that has assumed establishment credentials.

Trading companies are common in other nations, but not here. "Europe understands them and Japan is fully sophisticated," said Oztemel. "But we don't have an understanding."

We must change, he said, if we are to trade effectively.

CONSUMER BANKING SAFEGUARDS URGED

At the start of '77, a money dispensing machine affixed to a Washington, D.C., bank went on the blink and dispensed free money to customers seeking withdrawals from their accounts. The money-matic machine registered the customers, account numbers but not the totals of cash they withdrew.

While most of the bank's customers responded to an inquiry and reported the totals they had withdrawn, not all did so. Some couldn't recall how much money they had taken; others merely refused to reply.

Who is liable for the error? The customer or the bank?

The answer to that puzzler isn't clear now, but it would be if the advice of National Commission on Electronic Fund Transfers is accepted. For in a recently released interim report, the 26-member commission recommends: "The depository institution should be liable for erroneous, unauthorized or fraudulent use of the account," unless it can prove fraud or negligence on the customer's part.

Despite the angry criticism by financial institutions across the nation of a recent column in which I pleaded for consumer safeguards against the risks inherent in electronic fund transfer systems, the National Commission finally has also concluded that consumer safeguards are indeed imperative. It has forwarded its concerns and suggestions to relevant banking committees in Congress and is urging Congress to act quickly to protect EFT customers.

It was in 1974 that Congress established the commission to determine the role government regulation should place in computerized money handling.

But President Ford dragged his feet on making the necessary appointments and the staff didn't get to work until May 1976 — long after the market was being flooded by a host of computerized financial services, money dispensing machines, etc.

Many states have tried to deal with EFT questions by regulatory laws or by outlawing EFT altogether. Meanwhile, the financial industry has been arguing in and out of court whether or not EFT terminals constitute bank branches, who should have access to them, what services the machines should be allowed to provide.

Fears have multiplied about the consumer's rights and responsibilities under EFT, invasion of privacy, computer theft and computer error. Concern has mounted about loss of the "float" (the time it takes for a check to clear), the inability to stop payment under EFT, the customer's lack of proof of payment, etc.

After a few months of hearings, the commission upgraded these concerns to high priority and in its first two reports acknowledged that offsetting the advantages of EFT are the potentials for abuse. (Its second and final report is due in October 1977.) Among the commission's recommendations:

Congress should pass legislation giving citizens the right to contest government access to their financial records and to receive prior notice that their records have been subpoenaed. Also, private third parties should not be allowed to get information from anyone's account without his or her approval, except to verify the existence of the account or complete transactions.

Any EFT system should provide us with records or our transactions which can be used as cancelled checks — for record keeping, disputes with merchants, IRS discussions, the like.

While the "float" should not be mandatory, other means of providing for deferred payment should be offered as "a marketable and attractive service option." Under one method, called "value dating," you would specify the future date when actual payment will take place as distinct from the date of the transaction itself. This would be subject to the seller's or creditor's agreement.

You, the customer, should be told in writing of your rights and responsibilities under EFT at the

Ford Sales Peppy In Mid-March

DETROIT (AP) — A strong showing by Ford Motor Co.
allowed overall domestic auto sales in mid-March to match 1976 levels.

But sales fell short of the record pace set earlier this month when incentive contests were staged at General Motors

Ford on Wednesday reported a gain from the similar March 11-20 period a year ago, the only domestic automaker to do so.
Ford delivered 71,292 new cars year's period, compared with 65,735 during nine days in mid-

March 1976.

At GM, 118,401 deliveries

sales of 26,728 were off nearly 23

Ford Sales Peppy In Mid-March

DETROIT (AP) — A strong showing by Ford Motor Co. allowed overall domestic auto sales in mid-March to match 1976 levels.

But sales fell short of the record pace set earlier this month when incentive contests were staged at General Motors Corp.

Ford on Wednesday reported a gain from the similar March 11-20 period a year ago, the only domestic automaker to do so. Ford delivered 71,292 new cars in eight sales days during this year's period, compared with 65,735 during nine days in mid-March 1976.

At GM, 118,401 deliveries were made. Chrysler Corp. sales of 26,728 were off nearly 23 per cent. American Motors Corp. fell nearly 30 per cent, from 8,286 to 5,100.

PUBLISHER DIES
HAZLETON, Pa. (AP) — Frank Walser, president and publisher of the Hazleton Standard-Speaker, died Wednesday at Geisinger Medical Center in Danville. He was 66.

His Best Performance

Peck Still Lives MacArthur Role

MACARTHUR RETURNS: We hear Gregory Peck submerged himself so deeply in his role as Gen. MacArthur that he hasn't yet been able to shake off the character. Peck talks about the general constantly and has reportedly written a number of negative letters about the late President Harry Truman, who fired MacArthur. Peck also has yet to lose the 25 pounds he put on to play the General. Insiders who have seen the film say Peck's performance is absolutely incredible — the best he's ever done.

Q: Isn't it sort of weird that Faye Dunaway and her husband have moved to Boston? — E.O., Roanoke, Va.

A: Not so strange. Faye and husband Peter Wolf both have strong ties to Boston. She went to Boston University and the J. Gills Band, the rock group Peter stars in, is Boston-based. Also, Faye wants to be close to playwright William Alfred, who wrote "Hogan's Goat" — a play the actress scored in. Alfred is now doing a play about Jeanne

INTERESTING COINCIDENCE: Traditionally, U.S. presidents have paid scant attention to UN secretaries general. Current Secretary General Kurt Waldheim has been insisting that a conference be held in Geneva this spring to sort out the Middle East crisis. But President Carter believes such a conference shouldn't come until the fall. Recently, the President dined and dined Waldheim and his wife and daughter. He gave them the red carpet treatment with a White House lunch, a state dinner and even sent them home in the prestige-heavy Air Force One. Secretary Waldheim has now quietly changed his mind. He still thinks a Geneva conference is important — but believes it should be held in the fall.

Q: Is there any hope California's ex-Sen. John Tunney can make a comeback after blowing his reelection bid so badly? — R.H., Sherwood, Ore.

A: The big news about Tunney is that top Democratic money in California is having second thoughts and is contrite over deserting him. It's felt he still has enormous political potential and he's been forgiven for the jet-setting he did with fancy Easterners like Ted Kennedy. Party bigwigs are looking for a good slot for Tunney — maybe a slot at California's other Senate seat next year.

Q: How is Totie Fields doing since her leg amputation? — P.C., Los Angeles

A: Totie's doing remarkably well though she hasn't gained back as much weight as her doctors want. But Totie isn't complaining about her slim figure. She's scheduled to appear at the Sahara in Las Vegas for three weeks, starting April 7.

Q: You mentioned Gwen Verdon in a recent column. What are her plans now that she's announced that "Chicago" was

her last Broadway musical? — C.J., Fort Monmouth, New Jersey

A: Since leaving the Broadway musical "Chicago," Gwen has been writing a novel about a choreographer who hates dancers. She swears it is not about her ex-husband, Bob Fosse, who not only married Gwen but whose social life has been filled with dancers like Louise Quick and Ann Reinking.

His Best Performance

Peck Still Lives MacArthur Role

MACARTHUR - RETURNS: We hear Gregory Peck submerged himself so deeply in his role as Gen. MacArthur that he hasn't yet been able to shake off the character. Peck talks about the general constantly and has reportedly written a number of negative letters about the late President Harry Truman, who fired MacArthur. Peck also has yet to lose the 25 pounds he put on to play the General. Insiders who have seen the film say Peck's performance is absolutely incredible — the best he's ever done.

Q: Isn't it sort of weird that Faye Dunaway and her husband have moved to Boston? — E.O., Roanoke, Va.

A: Not so strange. Faye and husband Peter Wolf both have strong ties to Boston. She went to Boston University and the J. Geils Band, the rock group Peter stars in, is Boston-based. Also, Faye wants to be close to playwright William Alfred, who wrote "Hogan's Goat" — a play the actress scored in. Alfred is now doing a play about Jeanne

Eagles, the tragic silent screen star, for Faye. And lastly, the couple wanted to stay out of the Hollywood rat race.

INTERESTING COINCIDENCE: Traditionally, U.S. presidents have paid scant attention to UN secretaries general. Current Secretary General Kurt Waldheim has been insisting that a conference be held in Geneva this spring to sort out the Middle East crisis. But President Carter believes such a conference shouldn't come until the fall. Recently, the President dined and Waldheim and his wife and daughter. He gave them the red carpet treatment with a White House lunch, a state dinner and even sent them home in the prestige-heavy Air Force One. Secretary Waldheim has now quietly changed his mind. He still thinks a Geneva conference is important — but believes it should be held in the fall.

Q: Is there any hope California's ex-Sen. John Tunney can make a comeback after blowing his reelection bid so badly? — R.H., Sherwood, Ore.

A: The big news about Tunney is that top Democratic money in California is having second thoughts and is contrite over deserting him. It's felt he still has enormous political potential and he's been forgiven for the jet-setting he did with fancy Easterners like Teddy Kennedy. Party bigwigs are looking for a good slot for Tunney — maybe a shot at California's other Senate seat next year.

SHORT TAKES: Cathy Hawn seems to have decided the singles world is a cold place and is chasing after Dean Martin again. Friends feel Pat Crosby, Dean's sometime girl friend, never had much of a chance. David Janssen and Angie Dickinson were seeing each other while they were doing the TV movie, "A Sensitive, Passionate Man." When someone asked David's wife, Dani, about all that she said, "Well his clothes are still here." Mia Farrow and Rona Barrett haven't kissed but they did make up. Mia apologized to Rona for dumping a bucket of champagne on her head ten years ago. Mia was furious then because Rona reported that her marriage to Sinatra wasn't working and she was dating other men.

Q: Is Richard Burton getting tired of his little Susan yet? — M.S., Denver

A: Not so far, with Susan Hunt trying hard to give Burton the child Liz Taylor never did. Burton has been offered so many acting roles he could work non-stop for the next 20 years but swears what he wants is another family with his young wife. The acting offers go from King Lear to a musical version of "Treasure Island," with Burton playing Long John Silver.

Q: How is Totie Fields doing since her leg amputation? — P.C., Los Angeles

well though she hasn't gained back as much weight as her doctors want. But Totie isn't complaining about her slim figure. She's scheduled to appear at the Sahara in Las Vegas for three weeks, starting April 7.

Q: You mentioned Gwen Verdon in a recent column. What are her plans now that she's announced that "Chicago" was

her last Broadway musical? — C.J., Fort Monmouth, New Jersey

A: Since leaving the Broadway musical "Chicago," Gwen has been writing a novel about a choreographer who hates dancers. She swears it is not about her ex-husband, Bob Fosse, who not only married Gwen but whose social life has been filled with dancers like Louise Quick and Ann Reinking.
